

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE

The volume here presented seeks to furnish a guide to the county archives of California as well as a handbook dealing with their care, safety and use. In its preparation four distinct objects have been kept in mind: First, the consideration of the care and safety of the local public records of the state; second, a general description of the records, giving an account of their content and some idea of their value to the investigator; third, a complete list of all sets of records or documents to be found in the custody of the more important officers in the county, together with a statement as to dates covered and the number of volumes or documents; and fourth, the history of changes in the territorial jurisdiction of the various counties whose archives are under consideration.

The larger part of the volume is devoted to the lists of records found in the various counties. The counties are arranged in alphabetical order. This arrangement has also been followed in listing the records, unless some other order was obviously more desirable. The archives examined are those of the clerk, recorder, superintendent of schools and the four fiscal officers—auditor, treasurer, assessor, and tax collector. It is unnecessary to state that the first two offices are by far the most important. Although the other offices contain a relatively small amount of material it is felt that the results attained justified the outlay in time and energy. This would not apply, however, to the additional offices, whose archives were therefore not listed.

This report is the result of some two years of actual labor on the part of the staff of the commission. Because of the fact that other activities have been carried on at the same time the aggregate time required in its preparation has been longer. Most of the field work was accomplished during the years 1916 and 1917. The date when each courthouse was examined is stated in the introduction accompanying the report for that particular county. About one-third of the counties were examined by the author personally, the other two-thirds being examined by field assistants of the commission.

A special feature of this report is the series of maps showing the changes in the boundaries of the counties. It was at first thought that it would be a simple matter to compile maps indicating the organization of new counties as the state developed. It was soon discovered, however, that the work could not be done at all adequately without making a complete study of the boundary changes of each of the counties. In making this study it was found that the Political Code was entirely antiquated in its provisions defining the boundaries of the counties. In order to remedy this a measure was introduced by the commission

The volume here presented seeks to furnish a guide to the county archives of California as well as a handbook dealing with their care, safety and use. In its preparation four distinct objects have been kept in mind: First, the consideration of the care and safety of the local public records of the state; second, a general description of the records, giving an account of their content and some idea of their value to the investigator; third, a complete list of all sets of records or documents to be found in the custody of the more important officers in the county, together with a statement as to dates covered and the number of volumes or documents; and fourth, the history of changes in the territorial jurisdiction of the various counties whose archives are under consideration.

The larger part of the volume is devoted to the lists of records found in the various counties. The counties are arranged in alphabetical order. This arrangement has also been followed in listing the records, unless some other order was obviously more desirable. The archives examined are those of the clerk, recorder, superintendent of schools and the four fiscal officers—auditor, treasurer, assessor, and tax collector. It is unnecessary to state that the first two offices are by far the most important. Although the other offices contain a relatively small amount of material it is felt that the results attained justified the outlay in time and energy. This would not apply, however, to the additional offices, whose archives were therefore not listed.

This report is the result of some two years of actual labor on the part of the staff of the commission. Because of the fact that other activities have been carried on at the same time the aggregate time required in its preparation has been longer. Most of the field work was accomplished during the years 1916 and 1917. The date when each courthouse was examined is stated in the introduction accompanying the report for that particular county. About one-third of the counties were examined by the author personally, the other two-thirds being examined by field assistants of the commission.

A special feature of this report is the series of maps showing the changes in the boundaries of the counties. It was at first thought that it would be a simple matter to compile maps indicating the organization of new counties as the state developed. It was soon discovered, however, that the work could not be done at all adequately without making a complete study of the boundary changes of each of the counties. In making this study it was found that the Political Code was entirely antiquated in its provisions defining the boundaries of the counties. In order to remedy this a measure was introduced by the commission and approved by the legislature and governor redefining in full the boundaries of the counties of the state. The maps herein presented are the results of this study and are drawn in accordance with this recent legislation. It is believed that their value will be apparent to all who come in contact with the problem of the changes in county jurisdiction.

Throughout the whole enterprise the greatest care has been taken to prevent error, yet in a work so comprehensive as this, including so many detached items of fact, it can not be hoped that it is entirely free from error. In each case the reports upon the archives have been submitted to the official in charge of the office at least twice, once in the typewritten manuscript and again after the matter had been put in type. In most cases the officials approved the report as prepared; some noted errors or omissions; others failed to reply. It is believed that on the whole this volume may be taken as a faithful guide to the contents of the archives as they were at the time the survey was made.

No work of this character can be accomplished without the co-operation of many people. In this regard the author was fortunate in having the assistance and advice of many whose help has been most valuable. In the first place, generous acknowledgment is due to Professor Herbert E. Bolton, who as a member of the Historical Survey Commission, has by his advice and encouragement made possible the success of this work. Much is due to other historical and archive commissions, especially the reports of the Public Archives Commission of the American Historical Association and those of the Public Record Commission of Massachusetts and the volume on the County Archives of Illinois, all of which have been found most useful. The kindly spirit of co-operation shown by the county officials whose archives were examined, the assistance rendered by those in charge of the Bancroft Collection, the Boalt Law Library and the main library at the University of California, as well as the State Library at Sacramento, can not be passed over without a word of appreciation. Mention should also be made of those who, with the author, have served the commission during the preparation of this volume: Mr. Ralph S. Kuykendall, who as field assistant examined a large number of the counties and through criticism and advice has rendered other valuable aid; Mr. Emory Ratcliffe. Mr. C. F. Coan, Dr. W. C. Westergaard, Mr. A. M. North, Mr. G. L. Albright, Mr. E. G. Sewell and Miss May S. Corcoran, all of whom have assisted in the necessary field work. Finally, much appreciation is due Miss Hazel R. Bell, who in a secretarial capacity has given indispensable help in the painstaking task of checking and unifying the entries and in the correction of the proof sheets.

KEY TO MAPS

Accompanying the archive report of each county is a map showing the changes in its boundary and county seat. If there has been no change in boundary the map is given in black only; otherwise two colors have been added, red to represent the present boundary and blue for earlier lines. In like manner the present county seat is shown by means of a red circle; former county seats, by blue circles. The dates indicate the period when the place was the county seat. The original boundaries of the county are shown by means of a solid blue line, later changes by broken blue or red lines. In order to aid in distinguishing the boundaries for any period, the lines have been lettered, line a in each case representing the full boundary of the county after the first change was made. Accompanying each map is a legend which refers to the statute or code section defining the boundary as shown upon the map. For 1854 the citations are to the Redding edition of the statutes. Each map is accompanied by a scale of miles.

PART I

THE CARE AND USE OF COUNTY ARCHIVES

THE CARE OF ARCHIVES

THE IMPORTANCE OF ARCHIVES

Even as the fabric of modern civilization is built upon the foundation of past generations, so both the security of its institutions and the means of further progress depend in a vital manner upon the safety and accuracy of its records. In these Western States, so recently the frontier of civilization, the importance of this fact may not at first be evident. In European countries, on the other hand, it has been long recognized as a matter of great importance that the public records be properly preserved, both for administrative and historical reasons.

That the local public archives are an indispensable source to the historian is readily apparent to one familiar with that field. For, notwithstanding the other sources of information available to the research worker, he must turn to the public records for a large part of the facts around which he will seek to reconstruct the past. No adequate history of the development of the State of California can ever be written that is not based upon a more or less intimate knowledge of the great mass of information found in its local archives. From them is to be obtained first-hand information showing how the pioneer gold-seekers established their government and meted out summary punishment in their local courts; how in their efforts to find wealth and establish homes they explored remote regions and founded flourishing cities; and how slavery, although strictly forbidden by the constitution of the state, was allowed to exist for many years. They give in detail the story of the building of roads, the establishment of schools, the founding of churches and fraternal organizations; the growth of wealth and industry into the great current of modern life. Pioneer reminiscences and memoirs have real merit but must be checked with more trustworthy material; contemporaneous letters, diaries and newspapers are very valuable, but even these may be unreliable on account of personal prejudice or incomplete knowledge. The public archives, on the other hand, contain a vast supply of information which, on account of its official character, has been gathered or compiled with more regard for accuracy than is the case with much other material.

To be sure, the supply of facts to be obtained from the archives is not inexhaustible and upon many subjects may be quite limited, and yet one is surprised to discover that data recorded for one purpose may prove most helpful in throwing light upon some question seemingly entirely foreign to the original object, as for example, the use of election returns and records of school attendance to indicate relative growth and distribution of population. In similar manner the records of marriages, court proceedings, transfers of property, census reports and election returns, as well as many other record books, contain an array of facts which can not be found elsewhere. That these are of value alike to the historical investigator, the genealogist, and student of social science, is apparent even to the casual observer.

Many of the records are veritable mines of information, and scattered through the archives are frequently found books or documents whose unique character mark them as possessing unusual value. Among these should be mentioned the Spanish archives at Salinas, Santa Cruz, Los Angeles, San Francisco and elsewhere; the alcalde dockets in a large number of counties; the volume of Larkin papers in Monterey County archives; the many records of Spanish and Mexican land grants; as well as numerous scattering documents showing evidences of Negro and Indian slavery.

THE PRACTICAL VALUE OF ARCHIVE STUDY

Value to Keepers of Records. The study of archive problems, such as has been undertaken in this present survey, will doubtless be recognized as contributing not only to the field of historical research but will also be seen to be of no small value in assisting the keepers of our public records, especially the recorder and clerk, whose duties are largely those of archivists. When it is considered that the average public official is so busily engaged in the routine work of his office that he is unable to devote time to learn the nature of the contents of the great mass of record books piled up by his predecessors, it becomes evident, if he is to be expected to administer intelligently the archives in his possession, that any method whereby he can be helped to become more familiar with these records will be of value. In this respect the work which is represented in this report is aimed to be of value along several lines. In the first place, the study which has been made by this commission in the field of archive science permits it to present to the keeper of records something of the knowledge of experienced and trained archivists, not only in other states, but in European countries as well, where the accumulation of records and documents hundreds of years old has led to a thorough study of this science. Second, the study of the statutes and codes, with the resultant summary of the provisions of the laws dealing with the records, will enable the official, as well as layman, not only to become more familiar with the older records, but also to become more acquainted with the legislation regarding records now being kept, the citation of references to the codes and statutes being included in order that it may afford an easy reference to the laws themselves. Third, the thorough manner in which the archives, including not only the main offices in the courthouse, but basement, attic, and storerooms as well, have been examined has resulted in the location of many record books which had been misplaced in earlier years. Fourth, in order to secure, in so far as possible, a uniform order in the archive reports an attempt has been made to group the entries in a logical and systematic manner. In many cases the county officials may find it convenient to follow in some degree the grouping and order here suggested.

Value to the Taxpayer. That the work here represented has been and will continue to be of value to the taxpayer has already been indicated, for whatever assists in the preservation of the public record for the use of this and future generations, or aids the officials entrusted with the keeping of these records to become more intelligent and more efficient, will, in so far as it is successful, be of practical benefit to the state as a whole.

In addition to those advantages which have already been suggested, the following contributions should also be taken into consideration. First, the study which has been made of conditions existing in the courthouses in reference to danger from fires, dampness, and other elements of destruction, is of no small importance. In many cases, as will be pointed out in the report, there exists grave danger from fires, both from without and from inflammable material used in interior construction. That these conditions should be remedied immediately in the interest of the safety of the records, and therefore to the security of property, is readily apparent. Second, the materials used in making these records has been carefully considered, especially in reference to inks and paper. That the millions of dollars which are annually spent by the state in the compilation of these records should not be jeopardized through the use of faulty materials, should be plainly evident to all thoughtful citizens. Third, the close examination of offices, attics, basements, closets and vaults has revealed many valuable record books which had, in earlier years, been misplaced and given up as lost. In one case, El Dorado County, more than a dozen record books, many dealing with land titles, had been misplaced at the time of a courthouse fire in 1910 and had since that time been considered burned. These were found and returned to their proper place. What was done here was done in many other counties where books were found and returned to their legal custodian. That suits involving property titles valued at thousands of dollars may be averted by the location of these records is more than a mere probability.

THE HOUSING OF PUBLIC RECORDS

Fireproof Buildings. If public records are to be permanently preserved they must both be prepared in such a manner as to insure their ability to endure the rigorous tests of time and they must also be safely housed against loss by fire, decay and other elements of destruction. Since the greatest apparent danger to public records is through fire, an effort is usually made to see that in structures built to house them only fireproof materials are used. Practically all of the courthouses and halls of records constructed during the past two decades have been built in a fireproof manner; many of the older ones, however, fall far below what the standard should be.

Since no universal formula is known whereby it is possible to determine when a structure is adequately fireproof, this is largely a matter of individual judgment based upon a general knowledge of dangers from fires and of the local conditions, such as building material, isolation, fire protection, and the like. While examining the archives of the various counties an attempt has been made to note whether or not the county archives of California are properly housed. While, in general, it may be said that the courthouses have been built with the idea of guarding the safety of the records, in too many cases this has been inadequately done. Of the fifty-eight counties in the state, thirty-seven were classed as being probably safe from outside fires. In many cases this was due as much to the isolation of the building as to the nature of its material. Thirteen were clearly not fireproof, and eight others were jeopardized by their nearness to other structures which were a constant danger. When an examination was made of the interior of these buildings the results were found to be even less satisfactory, for should a fire once gain headway within the courthouse only eighteen gave evidence of being able to confine the fire to its place of origin, while thirty-one were clearly not fireproof, and nine only fireproof in part. To summarize then, thirteen or nearly one-fourth of the counties are not provided with fireproof buildings; twenty-seven or about one-half are partially protected; while but eighteen, less than one-third of the whole, are adequately protected. It should, however, be added that several of these buildings that are not fireproof are provided with vaults, where the greater part of the records are supposed to be kept. It is not, however, safe to assume either that the officers in charge always observe the precaution to place the records in the vault, or even that the vault itself can withstand much heat. On the other hand, sad experiences have shown that even structures supposed to be proof against fire have been seen to be sadly inadequate when put to the test. It is therefore, probable that some of the buildings classed as fireproof might not withstand Vaults. While a very large percentage of the county courthouses are to some extent provided with vaults, they are not used as fully as the safety of the records requires. This is doubtless due to the fact that, as a rule, they are poorly lighted, insufficiently ventilated, and not convenient of access, it being necessary in most cases to remove the books to some other place for consultation. The result is that in many cases the vaults are used for only a very small part of the records, principally those not in current use.

Another criticism to be made in regard to vaults is that they are often unsatisfactory as depositories for records because of dampness. This is usually due to their location, it being the common, although mistaken, practice to construct the vault in the basement or cellar or some other part of the building equally undesirable for other purposes. Experience in other states has shown that a vault should not be constructed in a basement, and should, if possible, be built to open into a room which gets the direct sunlight. Since a vault or safe will gather dampness unless opened frequently it should be opened and well ventilated at least once a week. To avoid excessive dampness vaults should be constructed with double walls, in such a manner as to permit the passage of air between the walls as well as within the vault. This may be done by means of a small pipe connecting with the flue, in such a manner that the damp air may be carried off and yet no fire be allowed to enter. In case the vault contains a small amount of moisture it may be absorbed through the use of lime, the lime being removed as soon as it becomes slaked. The lime should always be placed in a noncombustible vessel to avoid fire.

Storerooms, Basements and Attics. In addition to the main offices and vaults, often a very considerable part of the older county records are stored elsewhere in storerooms, which are most frequently located in basements or attics. While in some cases these rooms are reasonably well equipped for keeping the records safely, as a rule they are brought into service without much regard to their being suitable depositories for books and documents. Not infrequently the basements are damp, the attics dusty and mice-infested. In many cases the books are piled away without regard to their future use, with the natural result that all are soon a heterogeneous mass. Seldom are these places adequately equipped with electric lights, so there is constant danger of fire from matches or candles.

The material found in such parts of the courthouse consists almost entirely of semi-discarded records, those books which have not been called for by attorneys or searchers for some time. In general this is known as "junk," but, in spite of this commonly applied title, it frequently contains material of considerable historical value as well as documents that may at any time become important court records. That greater care should be taken of this older material is evident to anyone who makes even a superficial examination of this class of material. If it is a felony to destroy records some penalty ought to be meted out to the official who permits records to be cast away where they are almost sure to be destroyed by mould, mice, dust or heat.

Office Furniture. The equipment and furniture of an office used as a depository for records should be given more careful consideration than it has usually received, judging from what is to be found in the average courthouse. In many buildings the fire hazard is greatly increased because the offices, instead of being furnished with modern fireproof equipment, are supplied with wooden counters, book shelves and other furniture which in a few cases is accompanied by paste-board filing cases. Since smoking is seldom prohibited in these offices, and many are heated by wood stoves, it is apparent that the records kept in such surroundings are constantly in danger from fire. The more modern buildings are equipped with steel counters and enclosed steel filing cases and roller shelved book racks. The latter have the additional advantage in that they not only reduce greatly the danger from fire, but when closed prevent the accumulation of dust, and may be securely locked if there is danger of theft.

MATERIALS USED IN RECORD MAKING

Not only must the public records be safely housed in fireproof buildings properly equipped with vaults and convenient dry store-rooms, but it is also essential that care be taken to see that the materials used in the public records be selected with great care in order to guard against the danger that the ink with which they are written may fade or that the paper upon which they are written may dis-integrate. Although this commission has not been directly authorized to take up this matter, it has considered it within its jurisdiction to make at least a preliminary examination of the materials used in the offices of the county officials and to compare the results with similar investigation in other states where the public records are more closely supervised.

Inks. One of the most important elements affecting the permanency of a record is the quality of the ink used. This has long been recognized by the leading archivists of Europe and is being given increasing consideration in our own country. More than a century ago Thomas Astle, the keeper of records in London Tower, called attention to the "utmost importance" that the public records be written with ink of durable quality. In 1879 the German government, in seeking to protect the permanency of its records, prohibited the use of any other than iron-gall inks in its record books and some time later issued definite instructions as to the methods of classifying and testing the inks intended for use on public records. Subsequent extensive investigations by Schluttig and Neumann developed a definite formula for the manufacture of iron-gall ink, taking into consideration its various chemical elements.

In this country investigations along this line were first begun by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts through its public record commissioner, Robert T. Swan. Swan examined the various kinds of ink in use and concluded that many of them are entirely unsafe for use upon records where permanency is an important consideration.¹ None of the inks made from aniline dyes are permanent, and when once obliterated by light, heat, water or other causes, no means has been discovered whereby they can be made legible. Likewise, log-wood inks are unsatisfactory, as they have a tendency to turn brown, if they do not fade entirely. Carbon inks, when made in the proper manner, are permanent, but many so-called carbon inks are either not carbon inks or are improperly made and therefore not safe to use upon the records. Of all the common inks nut-gall and iron inks are, if properly made, considered the most permanent, for even in case the writing made by these inks should fade, it is possible to restore it by a nut-gall or tannate solution. Many inks which are recommended because proof against the action of acids may not be permanent against the action of time and even be dangerous because of their action upon the paper. As the result of Swan's investigations, Massachusetts came to adopt, as the standard for ink used upon its public records, the formula for iron tannate inks as worked out by Schluttig and Neumann. This has subsequently been adopted by the United States Treasury department and other government bureaus.

Standard Ink. Although leaving to the manufacturers of ink the opportunity to modify the details in such manner as they believe may facilitate manufacture or improve the quality of ink, there were adopted certain specifications and requirements which all inks, used upon the public records, are required to meet. They demand that the ink shall be gallo-tannate of iron ink, not inferior in any essential quality to one properly prepared in accordance with the specified formula, in which all the ingredients are of the strength and quality prescribed by the United States Pharmacopœia and the per cent of true acid present in the sample of tannic acid used has been determined by the Leowenthal and Schroeder method. The formula for standard record ink as adopted by Massachusetts is as follows:

Take of pure, dry Tannic Acid, 23.4 parts by weight.
of crystal Gallic Acid, 7.7 parts. of Ferrous Sulphate, 30.0 parts. of Gum Arabic, 10.0 parts. of diluted Hydrochloric Acid, 25.0 parts. of Carbolic Acid, 1.0 part. of Water, sufficient to make up the mixture at the temperature of 60° F.
to the volume of 1,000 parts by weight of water.

¹Massachusetts, Commissioner of Public Records, Report, 1891, pp. 119-121.

Besides these elements the United States government requires the addition of dye material similar to bavarian blue to give the mixture an immediate color.

The inks presented for approval are compared with the standard ink by being submitted to the following tests:

1. A fluid ounce allowed to stand at rest in a white glass vessel, freely exposed in diffused daylight for two weeks to the light and air, at a temperature of 50° to 60° F., protected against the entrance of dust, must remain as free from deposit upon the surface of the ink or on the bottom or sides of the vessel.

2. It must contain no less iron, and must have a specific gravity of 1.035 to 1.040 at 60° F.

3. It must develop its color as quickly.

4. After a week's exposure to diffused daylight the color must be as intense a black when used upon the standard record paper, and it must equally resist changes from exposure to light, air, water, or alcohol.

5. It must be as fluid, flow as well, strike no more through the paper, nor remain more sticky immediately after drying.²

Inks used in California Archives. As the result of inquiries in most of the counties of California it has been found that the inks of more than a dozen different manufacturers are in use in the offices of this state. The greater part of these are well established companies who doubtless have a pride in the quality of the ink manufactured by them, but in several counties inks were used which had been concocted by local dealers. Practically none of the counties had given the matter of the permanency of the ink serious consideration and little attention was given to the different kinds produced by any company to determine whether or not the particular brand used by them was durable. In some it was the habit to mix two kinds of ink together, and in many it was the rule to add water to the ink should it become thick by evaporation.

In order that the opinion of the manufacturer might be obtained upon some of these questions a letter was sent to each of them whose address could be obtained. Replies were received from practically all. As might be supposed, all named one or more kinds of ink produced by them which they would recommend for use in public records where permanency is the first consideration. Since many kinds of ink are frequently produced by the same company, it was not possible in all cases to know whether that particular ink, or some other brand, was the one really used. In response to the inquiry as to whether it is safe to mix two or more different kinds of ink, there was a unanimous expression that it should not be done, since it is extremely liable to eliminate the efficiency of both inks. On the question of the advisability of adding water to restore the fluidity of ink there was less decided opinion, but nearly all warned against the practice, for most inks are a chemical compound which, when once disturbed through evaporation, can not be readily restored. It was therefore advised that small ink-wells be used, which can be cleaned and refilled frequently.

Colored Inks. Examinations made of many bright colored inks indicate that they are apt to fade very quickly and hence should not be used upon records. A number of different kinds of red ink were examined by an expert chemist for Massachusetts with the conclusion that all were more or less fugitive and that there was no permanent red ink. In like manner blue and other colored inks were advised against. Fortunately these colored inks are not used to any important amount upon public records of the state. There has, however, been a custom in some counties to make endorsements upon documents or headings and marginal references on record books in red ink, while the document itself is copied in black. In view of the results of the investigations elsewhere made there can be no doubt that the safer plan would be to make all entries that are a part of a record in black ink only.

Stamp-pads. Although colored inks are but little used upon the public records, the use of rubber stamps for dating and indorsing documents is very common, and not infrequently these are used in permanent record books. That there is grave danger from the use of these there can be no doubt for the more brilliant colors—red, purple and green—are apt to fade very quickly. Black ink pads may prove to be more permanent, but the fact that the ink is not as a rule forced into the paper, as is the case with a pen or typewriter, increases the danger that any imprints made with a rubber stamp may not be permanent.

Typewriter Ribbons. With the invention of the book typewriter and the insertable leaf record book many of the offices have adopted the typewriter as an important factor in the copying of records. Although it is impossible without an examination of the various makes of ribbons to determine which, if any, are really permanent, black record ribbons produced by reliable companies are to be preferred, while, on the other hand, purple or other colored ribbons are to be avoided.

Record Paper. Notwithstanding the importance of securing a permanent ink it is of equal, if not even greater necessity, that the paper used in the record books and official documents have a quality enabling it to endure the rigorous test of time. The necessity of protecting the character and quality of the paper used in its records was recognized by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts more than a century ago. Subsequent investigations led to the passage of an act, in 1891, specifying that the standard should be “paper made of linen rags and new cotton clippings, well sized with animal sizing.” It is explained that linen rags are required because the previous wear upon the linen was found to be advantageous; that new cotton was required in order to avoid the excessive use of chemicals in cleaning the old; and that animal sizing was specified in order to avoid chemical treatment of the surface.³

The paper in general use in the record books in the county archives of California appears to be a good quality of ledger paper, and there is probably less danger from inferior quality of paper than from poor ink. Yet the point is of such grave importance that it should not be left to the judgment of the county official without the guidance of scientific experts. In regard to the paper used in the documents which are supposed to remain permanently on file there is much greater danger from an inferior grade being introduced, since these documents are often inscribed upon printed forms furnished by others than the county officials. Since, upon filing, they become a permanent part of the public records, regulations should be adopted prescribing that they be made upon a paper of durable quality.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS

Repair of Documents and Records. The constant use to which record books, maps and documents are subject makes it necessary that the keeper of these records, if he conscientiously seeks to perform his duty, must care for their repair. The most common practice is to employ a copyist to transcribe the records to replace the worn book. When they are badly worn this is the only thing that can be done, but in other cases it may be possible by a reasonable amount of care and forethought to repair books before the damage has reached a stage where repair is impossible. In the first place attention should be given to the office equipment to see that the wear upon the books is reduced to the minimum; for this reason horizontal roller shelves are recommended in place of the old-fashioned racks where the books were placed on end. The books should be conveniently arranged and labeled so that it will not be necessary to handle any book other than the one desired. A systematic effort should be made to inspect all books regularly and repair any damage as soon as it becomes noticeable. There are numerous methods of repairing torn pages so they may be reunited or strengthened without disturbing the reading matter on the page.

In many depositories a large number of volumes are constantly being destroyed through handling when the proper care to see that they are promptly rebound would extend their usefulness over an indefinite period. The archives should be periodically inspected and effort should be made to secure the co-operation of all who use the archives to the end that all neglect and needless damage to the records be eliminated.

³Massachusetts, Commissioner of Public Records, Report, 1901, p. 29.

Leather and canvas are most commonly used for the purpose of binding. Although the former was for many years the more popular form of binding, the superiority of canvas has now been demonstrated. Leather has been found to deteriorate and when subject to great heat even to melt into a dark mass which stains the records, when under similar circumstances the canvas bindings remain uninjured.¹ In rebinding it is suggested that the volumes be interleaved with pages larger than the original in order to protect the older paper which in many cases has become brittle and is therefore easily broken. Care also should be taken to see that the correct title and inclusive dates be stamped on the back of each volume.

Copying of Records. Through repeated handling records sooner or later become unfit for further use; it becomes necessary to provide for copying them. Furthermore, the formation of new counties or shifting of county boundaries often places property under the jurisdiction of a different county from the one in which the title was originally entered, in which case it is desirable to reproduce the record in the archives of the new county to which the property belongs. In the case of several of the more recently formed counties the act creating the county has provided for the transcribing of all those records which properly pertained to lands in the detached portion. It is unfortunate that this has not been required in every case, for, in addition to the convenience in consulting records, this plan provides an additional official copy of the record which, in case of loss of the original, may be most valuable.

In copying records or documents absolute adherence to the text of the original document must be demanded. Unfortunately many of the early copies of documents have not followed carefully the original. This, of course, destroys confidence in the copy and may even render it worthless as an official document. Recent transcripts show greater care in copying and in making the comparisons, so that the criticism which is made of earlier copyists is no longer so fully justified.

Photography. The use of photography has been suggested as a means of recording documents. Measures relating to this matter have been before the state legislature at its last few sessions, but up to the present no action has been taken approving of the plan. The arguments favoring the method are, first, that a truer reproduction of the original documents would be made by a camera than by any copyist, thus eliminating the errors which often find their way into recorded documents; and second, that the expense would be lessened.

¹Massachusetts, Commissioner of Public Records, Report, 1890, pp. 38-39; 1892, p. 74.

Opposed to these arguments are the following important considerations: Since many of the documents preserved for record are almost illegible because of poor penmanship, it becomes one of the important functions of the copyist to determine the true wording of the document and then transcribe it into uniform legible script or type. That this, when done in a manner to insure an accurate reproduction of the original, is a valuable service, none can deny. Again, up to the present time the paper used for photographic purposes is thicker than the heaviest of ledger paper used in the records and can only be used on one side. The inevitable result would be that the records would require at least twice the space they now occupy and probably an even larger amount. Furthermore, the permanence of the photographic record has not yet been established. There are two essentials to this quality of permanence: first, a paper which will withstand the heavy usage to which a public record is constantly subjected; and second, the imprint upon the record page must be made in a manner which will not permit it either to fade or be erased. It has not yet been sufficiently demonstrated that the photographic impression is capable of enduring permanently, while there is an even more grave danger that the paper itself can not sustain the constant wear. In view of these considerations it would seem to be unsafe at present to permit the use of photography as a substitute for the present method of copying documents for the official records. The objections here raised do not, however, apply to transcripts from the official records such as certified copies of recorded documents.

Insertable-leaf Record Books. Since 1901 the laws have permitted the use of separate or insertable-leaf record books in the office of the county record keepers. Although the provision was made optional, books of this kind are now employed in nearly all of the counties of the state. For convenience and economy there can be no question as to their desirability. The safety of this kind of a book as a record depends very largely upon the officials in whose care they are placed. During the time that the volume is being filled it must be carefully protected from fraud. All pages should be stamped with their consecutive numbers as soon as the volume is commenced, to prevent the substitution of a different page for one already used. As soon as a document is recorded it should be indexed. When the volume has been filled it may be locked and hence become as permanent a record as a sewed book. In general the use of record books of this character is approved by public officials and it is believed that their desirability has been demonstrated; however, the necessity for caution is an ever present factor.

In those offices handling financial records only there are grounds for serious complaint regarding the abuse of the insertable-leaf record books. Due to the fact that insufficient binders are provided, it is found that in far too many cases financial records which might otherwise be valuable are rendered useless because the sheets when filled are not permanently bound, but placed carelessly away in a corner of the office or in the vaults or storeroom without regard to their future use. The result of this is that in many counties where ledgers, cash books, warrant registers, and other records have been well kept during a long period of time they are not to be had for the more recent years.

Economy in Archive Space. The problem of sufficient room is a very serious one in many offices. Unfortunately this condition exists not only in those counties that are still using antiquated courthouses, but even in many counties that have but recently built new county buildings. It is too often the case that the county boards do not have sufficient vision to foresee the needs of the future, with the result that expensive and well appointed buildings soon become inadequate to meet the growing demands of the county. The remedy for this is more care in planning and constructing public buildings.

But quite aside from the consideration of the size of the building, the matter of record space requires serious consideration, for it leads sooner or later to an attempt to discriminate between those records which are essential and those which are of less or of no further value, a matter which is too often determined by men incapable of judging the real value of a document. At any time a record which has been unused for years may suddenly become the center of interest in some matter of great importance. An effort should therefore be made to conserve all the space possible and yet not discard anything which may at some time prove to be of value. One way in which this can be accomplished in nearly every courthouse is by discarding the unused pages in record books which are no longer in current use, if need be having the books rebound.

Should it become imperative that a portion of the records be destroyed this operation should be carried out under the supervision of some person whose knowledge of the archives and of the uses to which the records may be put enables him to know what documents may be disposed of with the least possible danger. It would be well if no records were allowed to be discarded or destroyed except under the supervision of a state officer specially qualified for that task.

The question of space is closely connected with that of centralization of archives. In many states the policy has been adopted that such local archives as are no longer needed for administrative purposes should be centralized at some central archive. There are many issues involved in the consideration of this policy such as local pride opposing removal, the classes of archives that should be removed, and that of adequate space in the central archive itself. In view of these apparent difficulties no recommendation can be made at present. It is, however, believed that the time must come when records whose usefulness to the immediate community has passed should be properly cared for in some place where their real value as historical documents will be more carefully recognized and respected. At present many records of great value to the historian, and pertinent also to the rights of citizens, are carelessly relegated to what is commonly known as the "junk heap."

Training of Archivists. So long as the care of public records is made dependent upon the fickle changes of political opinion it can not be expected that their care and safety will at all times be the paramount consideration. While the democratic principle of rotation in office may have elements in its favor in some cases, it can not be justified in reference to those officials entrusted with the immediate care of public records. The remuneration attached to such offices as the county clerk and recorder should be sufficient to make it possible for men of competence and ability to devote their attention to the work; it should not, on the other hand, be so high as to make the position sought after as a reward for party loyalty, or political favor. When an official has demonstrated his ability and worth his tenure of office should not be disturbed by petty considerations.

What is said of elected officials applies also to assistants in these offices. In fact, it frequently is the case under our system of government that the deputies are more expert in handling the duties of the office than are their superiors. Other states, following the example of the European countries, have seen so clearly the need of trained archivists in charge of their central and local records that they have established schools for training of persons in archive methods. From experts thus trained it is possible for clerks, recorders and other officials to select their staff of assistants.

In these new Western States, where our oldest records were written but a few decades ago, it may be too much to expect that public sentiment will appreciate fully the importance of the safety and permanence of its records. The time will inevitably come, however, when this will be recognized by all and the demand will then be made that the utmost care be exercised both in the preparation and preservation of public records and that none but trained archivists, thoroughly equipped with knowledge and experience in archive science, be given charge of any public records.

THE CLERK

GENERAL PROVISIONS

The two most important record-keeping offices in the county are those of the clerk and recorder. It is necessary that the worker who desires to exploit the field of local history should become familiar with the records of both of these offices, and have some idea of the contents of the others as well, if he is to make adequate use of historical sources. The clerk has many administrative as well as archive duties, while on the other hand the activity of the recorder is devoted almost entirely to transcribing or otherwise preserving documents which are presented to him for that purpose.

For convenience the records under the supervision of the clerk have been divided into three main classes, corresponding to the kinds of work performed by that officer. They are: I, Court records; II, Supervisors' records; and III, Miscellaneous records. With the first division is to be found a brief historical account of the various courts of which the county clerk has by law been made the clerk, together with a description of the various records kept by the courts. The second division includes all those records kept by the county clerk in his capacity as clerk of the board of supervisors. The third division is much less easily defined, but includes all other records kept by the county clerk; for many of his duties can not be considered as falling to him either as a clerk of the court or as clerk of the county board.

The earliest act prescribing the duties of the county clerk was passed by the first legislature, April 18, 1850, and stated them to be as follows¹: He was ex officio clerk of the district court, court of sessions and probate court of his county; he was empowered to administer oaths and to receive bonds; was required to attend each term of the county court and the other courts of the county; to keep an office at the county seat and "take charge of and safely keep or dispose of according to law all books, papers and records, which may be filed or deposited in his office." A further section set forth that he was to issue all writs, enter all orders, judgments and decrees proper to be entered in the minutes; to keep a docket of each court, in which he was to make certain specified entries; and was to keep such other books or records as might be prescribed by law or by the rules of the court.

A few unimportant amendments were made before 1872, when the duties of the clerk were outlined in the Political Code.² The first paragraph reiterated the provision regarding the safe-keeping of all records, books and papers filed or deposited in his office; the second declared that he was to act as the clerk of the board of supervisors, district, county and probate courts and attend each term of them and upon the judges in their chambers when required; third, that he was to issue all processes and notices required to be issued and to keep for each court a docket; fourth, he was to keep an index of all suits in the district and county courts. Among his duties were also included the keeping of such other records and duties as might be prescribed by law.

¹Stats. 1850: 261-2.

²Pol. Code (1872), §§ 4204-4205.

Since that time the changes made in the code have been of little importance.³ In 1907 the code was rearranged and the sections cited replaced by sections 4178 and 4179, but these did little more than to incorporate the old provisions. With the adoption of the present constitution in 1880, the older courts gave way to the superior court with a consequent change in the title of the clerk's records.⁴

COURT RECORDS

HISTORY AND ORGANIZATION OF THE COURTS

District Court. At the time the state was first organized and for thirty years thereafter the judicial affairs of the counties were administered by three, and, for a part of the time, four separate courts. These were the district court, county court, probate court and the court of sessions. The highest of these was the district court. The district judges held court at the various county seats in their districts at certain specified dates. The jurisdiction of the court was original in all cases of law and equity and civil cases where the amount exceeded $200; and in all criminal cases not otherwise provided for; it covered all issues of fact in probate cases; and all cases of real property. The county clerk was clerk of the court. By an act of March 11, 1851, the term of the judges was fixed at six years, and the court given appellate jurisdiction over the county court, and the court of sessions in criminal matters.⁵ The number of districts was increased from nine in 1850 to twenty-three in 1879.

In the year 1863 the district court was given jurisdiction over cases involving the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll or municipal fine.⁶ In an act approved April 4, 1864, the matter of tax suits was much more fully considered, it being provided that all actions for the collection of taxes on real estate, wherein an order of sale was sought by the plaintiff, should be heard in the district court of the proper county. For the keeping of the records regarding these suits the clerk of the court might be required to procure books as follows: an index book; a register of actions; an order book; and a decree book.⁷ Records pertaining to tax suits have been found in more than half of the counties. In five counties the complete set is to be found.

This court also had jurisdiction in matters of naturalization, but since the records in reference to this are considered later under the head of Miscellaneous Records no further mention will be made here. Under the constitution of 1879 the district court was discontinued, its jurisdiction within each county being given to the superior court of that county.⁸

County Court. By action of the first legislature a county court was established in each county, under the supervision of the county judge. Four regular sessions were to be held annually for the trial of appeals from the justices of the peace and such special cases as might be pending. The county judge was empowered to issue writs of habeas corpus and as conservator of the peace of the county could exercise all the powers of the justices of the peace as conservators of the peace. He was given jurisdiction over probate matters, and was required to hold a session of court for the hearing of such matters on the first Monday of each month. He was also given power to issue writs of injunction, mandamus, attachment and all other writs and processes known to the law. The county clerk was clerk of this court.⁹

In 1851 a general law was passed concerning the courts of justice of the state which repealed all previous laws on the subject. Under the new law the county court continued as before to have jurisdiction in lesser civil cases, except that its probate jurisdiction was given to a probate court which was created, the county judge being, however, the judge of this new court. The appellate jurisdiction of the county court, which originally included judgments rendered in civil cases in justice's or recorder's courts in the county, was extended in 1853 to include also mayor's courts. In 1863 the court of sessions was abolished and its criminal jurisdiction given to the county court.¹⁰ Under the constitution of 1879 this court was discontinued, being superseded by the superior court.¹¹

Court of Sessions. Under an act of the legislature of 1850 a court of sessions was organized in each county of the state. This court was composed of the county judge and two justices of the peace, the county clerk being clerk of the court. Meetings were to be held every other month and their business was divided into two kinds known as criminal jurisdiction and county business. The criminal jurisdiction of the court of sessions extended to all cases of assault, assault and battery, breach of the peace, riot, affray, petit larceny and misdemeanors punishable by fine not over $500 or three months imprisonment. In addition to this criminal jurisdiction the court supplied the place later taken by the board of supervisors. Since the two kinds of business were radically different the clerk was required to keep a separate set of minutes and records for each.¹² In spite of this provision, however, in many of the counties the minutes were combined. The records relating to county business will be considered under the records of the board of supervisors.

An act of March 11, 1851, repealed the former law but embodied most of its features. As given in this act the jurisdiction of the court was: (1) to inquire, by the intervention of a grand jury, of all public offenses committed or triable in the county; (2) to try and determine indictments found therein, for all public offenses except murder, manslaughter and arson; (3) to hear and determine appeals from the justices', recorders' and mayors' courts in cases of a criminal nature.¹³ In 1863 the court of sessions was discontinued and its criminal jurisdiction given to the county court.¹⁴

Probate Court. The act of the legislature by which the county court was created gave to that court jurisdiction over probate matters, except that issues of fact joined in the probate court were to be tried in the district court. For the transaction of probate business the county judge was to hold a term of the court on the first Monday of every month.¹⁵

In 1851 a distinct court was created, to be known as the probate court, the county judge being made judge of this court. Its jurisdiction was similar to that formerly exercised by the county court over probate business.¹⁶ Regarding issues of fact, it was required that in certain cases they should, on request of either party, be tried in the district court, but might by consent of the parties be tried in the probate court. Appeals were also allowed to the district court from the decisions of this court.¹⁷

In 1864 an amendment to the law of 1851 allowed appeals to the supreme court from decisions of the probate court. In 1868 the sections regarding trial of issues were amended so as to require these issues to be tried by a jury in the probate court instead of in the district court. As thus amended the provisions for the probate court were incorporated in the Code of Civil Procedure in 1872.¹⁸ The probate court was discontinued in 1879, being superseded by the superior court, in accordance with the provisions of the constitution adopted in that year.¹⁹

Probate Records. Although since 1879 the probate court has ceased to exist as a separate court, it has been the rule under the superior court that the records of probate business should be kept separate from the regular civil and criminal business of the court. In the larger counties probate matters are turned over to a special department of the court. There is a great diversity in the methods of keeping the probate records, depending somewhat upon the size of the counties. This department, in common with the others, has a calendar, docket, index, file, register of actions and minutes. With the latter are included orders of the court. The larger offices have a great number of form books for entering orders, but all the volumes of minutes and orders are usually numbered consecutively in one series. In the probate department are also found volumes in which are recorded letters of administration and guardianship, in several different forms, guardians' inventories and appraisements, wills admitted to probate, and the records regarding the collateral inheritance tax.

Superior Court. The present judicial system dates from 1880 when, under the provisions of the constitution adopted the preceding year, a superior court was created in each county to care for the business previously handled by the district, county and probate courts.

In the smaller counties one judge is sufficient to handle all the business of this court, but in the larger counties several judges are elected to this position. When there is more than one judge the court is divided into departments, a department being assigned to each. One of the judges is then designated as presiding judge, in which capacity he assigns cases to the various departments; otherwise there is no difference in rank among them. It is usually the rule, in so far as practicable, to divide among the different departments the various kinds of cases such as criminal, civil, probate and juvenile matters. In many counties a separate set of records is kept for each of these four classes of business, although in some civil and criminal business are combined.

Juvenile Court. The Juvenile Court law, approved March 8, 1909, provided that the superior court should exercise the jurisdiction conferred by that act. In counties where there were more than one judge, one was to be selected to preside over this court. The sessions of the juvenile court must be held separate from other court sessions, and no persons permitted to be present except such as were connected with the business of the court. The orders and findings of the court were to be recorded in a "book to be kept for that purpose and known as the 'juvenile court record.'"²⁰ The Juvenile Court law of 1915 made no change in the provisions cited above except to require the orders and findings to be entered in a "suitable book or books or other form of written record, to be kept for that purpose, and known as the 'juvenile court record'."²¹ In most of the counties this law has been observed. In five of them, however, there are no juvenile court records.

DESCRIPTION OF RECORDS

Roll of Attorneys. An act of February 19, 1851, provided that admission of attorneys to general practice before all the courts of the state should be made by the judges of the supreme court, although the judges of the district and county courts might admit to practice in their respective courts. The clerk of each court was required to keep a roll of attorneys and counselors at law admitted to practice before the court of which he was clerk, which roll the attorney was required to sign before he received his license, the roll being a record of the court. This arrangement continued in force until the adoption of the Code of Civil Procedure in 1872 when the provision regarding the district and county courts was omitted, being restored, however, by an amendment to the code in 1874. In 1880 the superior court took the place of the district and county courts. In 1895 the provision of the code permitting the superior court to admit attorneys to practice in that court was again removed, and in 1905 the examination and certification of attorneys was made the duty of the judges of the district courts of appeal. The clerks of these courts keep a roll of attorneys and transmit monthly to the clerk of the supreme court a list of those admitted during the month, and the clerk of the supreme court keeps a general roll of all attorneys admitted to practice in the state.¹

Calendar. A book in which the clerk enters the cases before the court according to the date of issue. Under each date of the court session the clerk enters the titles of the cases to come before the court on that day, and after hearing, a notation showing what disposition was made of the case, whether dismissed, continued, etc., and if continued, to what date.² This book can not properly be called a record as it is of little value except for current use of the court. In most counties no attempt is made to preserve it.

Docket. A record book showing the title of each case, date of commencement, memorandum of each subsequent proceeding in such cause with the date thereof, and list of all fees charged in the cause. In the case of criminal action it must show each indictment according to date of filing; whether a felony or misdemeanor and whether the defendant be in custody or on bail.³

Execution Book. An amendment to the Practice Act, approved April 2, 1866, provided that when an execution shall have been returned by the sheriff to the clerk, it shall be the duty of the latter to attach the same to the judgment roll. "If any real estate be levied upon, the clerk must record the execution and the return thereto at large, and certify the same under his hand as true copies, in a book to be called the 'execution book,' which book must be indexed with the names of the plaintiffs and defendants in execution alphabetically arranged."⁴

Execution Docket. An act of April 22, 1850, provided that the clerk should keep an execution docket in which he should enter an abstract of all executions issued by him, setting forth the names of the parties, character of the writ, amount, if it be for money, date of judgment with reference to page of record in which it was entered, date of execution, officer to whom issued, and return made upon the execution. This act was repealed the following year and the new act contained no mention of an execution docket, but the record was still kept in a number of counties, in five of them down to the present time.⁵

File or Judgment Roll. The court file, more technically called the judgment roll, contains in civil cases the following papers: In case the complaint be not answered by the defendant, the summons and the affidavit or proof of service, and the complaint with a memorandum endorsed on the complaint that the default of the defendant in not answering was entered, together with a copy of the judgment and any orders relating to a change of the parties.⁶ In criminal cases the file contains, as required by the Criminal Practice act of 1851: (1) a copy of the minutes of any challenges which may have been interposed by the defendant to the panel of the grand jury, etc.; (2) the indictment and a copy of the minutes of the plea or demurrer; (3) minutes with reference to challenges of trial jurors; (4) copy of the minutes of the trial; (5) copy of the minutes of the judgment; (6) bill of exceptions, if there be one; (7) the written charges asked of the court, if there be any. The Penal Code in 1872 added, (8) a copy of all charges given and of the endorsements thereon. This was amended in 1874 and continues in the present Penal Code which says the file shall contain: (1) the indictment or information and a copy of the minutes of the plea or demurrer; (2) a copy of the minutes of the trial; (3) the written instructions given, modified or refused, and the endorsements thereon and a certified transcript of the charge of the court; and (4) a copy of the judgment.⁷

This is one of the few court records that may be found in all the counties. The papers are usually filed numerically, the number being the same as that assigned the case when it was entered in court. They therefore follow in general a chronological sequence. In some, as in Sacramento County, the cases which have been dismissed are filed separately, the case number, however, remaining the same. In some of the smaller counties, especially in probate cases, the papers are filed under the initial letter of the parties or estate in court.

General Index. The clerk is required to keep, in separate volumes, an index to all suits. One volume is headed "General Index—Plaintiffs" and has columns for entering the number of the suit, name of plaintiff, name of defendant, date of judgment, page of entry in the judgment book, page of minute book of the court. The other volume is headed "General Index—Defendants" and has a similar arrangement of columns. The only difference between the two volumes is that in the first the names of the plaintiffs are arranged alphabetically, while in the second the names of the defendants are so arranged.⁸

As a usual thing the index to the court records is very well kept in all the counties. This is probably accounted for by the fact that these records are so often used by searchers of titles. Entries are made chronologically under alphabetical subdivisions.

Insanity Commitments. In 1881 an amendment to section 2217 of the Political Code was adopted which requires that the county clerk shall keep a copy of the order committing an insane person to a state hospital and shall prepare an index book showing the name, age and sex of each person ordered confined, together with the date of the order and the name of the institution in which such person is ordered to be confined.⁹

Although insanity records appear in all of the counties, they do not uniformly follow the provisions of the law just cited. The record committing the insane person may be found at times in an Order Book, Record of Commitment, Judgment Book, or in the Minutes of Insane. The index referred to is kept in about one-half of the counties.

Insanity—Certificates of Discharge. There was added to the Political Code in 1903 a provision that when any person is discharged, as recovered, from a state hospital for the insane, a copy of the certificate of discharge may be filed for record with the clerk of the superior court of the county from which said person was committed. The clerk shall record the same in a book kept for that purpose and shall keep an index thereto.¹⁰ In something less than half of the counties this is kept in a separate book; in the others it is usually entered with the record of commitment.

Inquests. An act concerning coroners, passed April 19, 1850, required that after the holding of an inquest the "testimony of the witnesses examined . . . shall be reduced to writing by the Coroner . . . and . . . filed by him, with the inquisition [verdict of the jury], in the office of the Clerk of the District Court of the County." But if the person charged with the killing had been already arrested the coroner was to deliver this testimony and inquisition to the magistrate before whom the prisoner was brought, and the magistrate was required to return them to the clerk of the district court.¹¹ These provisions were incorporated in the Penal Code in 1872, with, however, the "county court" substituted for the "district court" in each case. Recognizances of witnesses, when taken by the coroner, were also required to be filed along with the testimony and verdict.¹² In 1880 these became a record of the supreme court.

Judgment Book. A book in which the clerk is required to enter a transcript in full of every judgment rendered by the court in a civil action. Criminal judgments are copied directly into the minutes.¹³

Judgment Docket. A book which the clerk is required to keep, having each page divided into columns headed as follows: Judgment debtors; Judgment creditors; Judgment; Time of entry; Where entered in judgment book; Appeals, when taken; Judgment of appellate court; Satisfaction of judgment, when entered. In 1907 an amendment required an additional column for the date of the entry in the docket.¹⁴

Jury Lists. An act concerning jurors, approved April 28, 1851, provided that after the drawing of the lists of jurors, grand and trial, these lists should be filed in the office of the county clerk. Since that date there has been considerable variation in the method of preparing the jury lists, but the provision for filing in the office of the county clerk has been retained to the present day.¹⁵

About one-third of the counties have these jury lists. On the other hand a Jury Book or Jury Record, containing time of service, fees, etc., is to be found in a very large portion of the counties.

Minutes. These are a record of the daily proceedings of the court containing a synopsis of all orders, judgments and decrees proper to be entered, unless the court shall order them to be entered at length.¹⁶

It is customary for the clerk to take rapid notes of the business transacted by the court in blotters or rough minute books. These are later copied in proper form into other books known as smooth minutes. The smooth minutes are considered the minutes of the court, although in some cases the rough minutes have also been preserved. Frequently they are referred to in preference to the smooth minutes.

Register of Actions. A book in which the clerk of the court is required to enter the title of each action, with brief notes under it, from time to time, of all papers filed and proceedings had thereon.¹⁷ This is probably the most important of the court records, as it contains in one place practically a full record of each case. It is therefore much used by searchers of titles. This book, together with the file, minutes and index, constitute the only court records which are always to be found.

Reporters' Notes. In all of the courthouses great quantities of court reporters' shorthand notes are to be found. Although they contain a great deal of information the difficulty of deciphering their contents makes them of little actual value.

Transcripts on Appeal. When a case is appealed to the supreme court it is required that a transcript including all the evidence, motions, court rulings, etc., be prepared in printed form and bound for the use of the court. It becomes readily apparent, therefore, that the value of such a document is limited only by the nature of the case to which it refers.

SUPERVISORS' RECORDS

HISTORY AND POWERS

Under the provisions of a law passed April 11, 1850, the court of sessions in each county was given authority to control the property of the county, to audit and pay accounts, to levy taxes, to control and manage highways, form townships and election precincts, and to perform many other duties now under the jurisdiction of the board of supervisors. The law provided that the court should hold separate sessions for the transaction of county business and it was required that the minutes and all other records of the court when so sitting should be kept separate and distinct from the records of the court when sitting as a court of criminal jurisdiction, a rule which, as noted elsewhere, was not always observed. The county clerk was made the clerk of the court of sessions and he was required to record in a book kept for the purpose the minutes of the court and regular entries of all resolutions, orders, decisions, judgments and decrees touching county business.¹

¹⁶Pol. Code (1915), § 4178.

¹⁷Stats. 1851:134; Code Civ. Proc., § 1052.

An act of April 29, 1851, created for the county of San Francisco a board of supervisors and conferred upon them the powers in matters of county business formerly exercised by the court of sessions. In the following year a similar law was passed applying to all the counties of the state except San Joaquin, Butte, Trinity, Santa Barbara, Nevada, Yuba, Solano, Mariposa, Sutter, Placer, Shasta, Siskiyou, Klamath, and Sierra.² This law was subsequently, at different times, repealed in so far as it related to the counties of Calaveras, Colusa, Contra Costa, Marin, Monterey, Sacramento, Santa Clara, Tulare, and El Dorado, and the powers and duties of the board of supervisors in those counties handed back once more to the court of sessions.³

March 20, 1855, the law of 1852 was repealed and a new act passed which provided that "there shall be in each of the counties of this State a Board of Supervisors," and from this date the court of sessions ceased to have any legislative functions, although it continued as a criminal court until 1863. There were from time to time special acts relating to the boards of supervisors in particular counties, but it will be unnecessary to notice these acts as they did not affect the general outlines of the law of 1855. This law, variously amended and augmented, was embodied in the Political Code in 1872 and in the various acts providing for a uniform system of county government.⁴

The powers and jurisdiction of the board of supervisors, as stated in the law of 1855, were as follows:

1. To make orders respecting and to take care of and preserve the property of the county;
2. To examine, settle and allow all accounts against the county and levy the necessary and lawful taxes;
3. To examine and audit the accounts of all officers having to do with county money;
4. To lay out, control and manage roads, ferries, bridges, etc.;
5. To take care of and provide for the indigent sick of the county;
6. To divide the county into townships and to change these as convenience may require;

7. To establish and change election precincts and appoint inspectors and judges of elections;

8. To control and manage the property of the county and to receive, by donation, any property for the use and benefit of the county;

9. To lease or purchase any real or personal property necessary for the county, after a proper valuation by three disinterested persons;

10. To sell at public auction, after thirty days notice, any property of the county;

11. To cause to be erected, furnished and kept in repair a courthouse, jail or other public buildings, after receiving bids duly advertised;

12. To control the prosecution and defense of all suits to which the county is a party;

13. To do and perform all such other acts and things as may be strictly necessary to the full discharge of the powers and jurisdiction conferred on the board.

The board was directed to act as a board of equalization, to cause the state and county taxes to be levied, to publish a semiannual statement of the revenues of the county, and, by an order entered on the record, to adopt, ratify and confirm all the acts, proceedings and contracts of the court of sessions heretofore made.⁵

Subsequent legislation has greatly expanded the powers and jurisdiction of the board of supervisors, but most of these later additions were included or implied in the enumeration above. It may, however, be well to note some of these additional powers as they are given in the Political Code:

14. To maintain public pounds and to fix the limits within which animals shall not run at large;

19. To fill vacancies in county and township offices, with certain exceptions;

26. To destroy pests, such as gophers, squirrels, noxious weeds and insects injurious to fruits or vegetable or animal life;

27, 28. To protect sheep, fish and game;

29. To provide for working of prisoners on public roads, buildings, etc.;

31. To make local police, sanitary and other regulations;

33. To levy a tax for advertising the resources and advantages of the county;

39. To encourage tree planting;

40. To protect river banks;⁶

41. To replace indexes of county records destroyed by fire or other public calamity;⁷

42. To preserve the health of domestic live stock;⁸

43. To take a census, in years other than those in which the federal census is taken, of the county or of any township or district therein.⁹

DESCRIPTION OF THE RECORDS

The earlier laws contained only general provisions that the board of supervisors (or court of sessions) should cause to be kept a book in which should be entered fully the minutes of the board and all their resolutions, orders, decisions, judgments and decrees.¹⁰ The Political Code, adopted in 1872, in defining the duties of the clerk of the board, provided that he must: (1) Record all the proceedings of the board; (2) Make full entries of all their resolutions and decisions on all questions concerning the raising of money for and the allowance of accounts against the county; (3) Record the vote of each member on a division or at the request of any member; (4) Sign all orders made and warrants issued by order of the board for payment of money and certify the same to the county auditor; (5) Record the reports of the county treasurer of the receipts and disbursements of the county; (6) Preserve and file all accounts acted upon by the board; (7) Preserve and file all petitions and applications for franchises and record the action of the board thereon; (8) Record all orders levying taxes; (9) Perform all other duties required by law or by any rule or order of the board.¹¹ To which were added in 1883 the following: (10) Authenticate with his signature and the seal of the board the proceedings of the board whenever the same shall be ordered published; (11) Authenticate all ordinances passed by the board, and to record the same at length in the ordinance book.¹²

To attempt to analyze all the records to be found in the offices of the boards of supervisors would be impractical. A few of the more important ones have, however, been selected for special consideration.

Allowance Book. This is a book in which the clerk is required to record all orders for the allowance of money upon the county treasury, to whom made, on what account, date, number.¹³ This record is sometimes called "Record of Claims Allowed" and is similar to the Register of Warrants or Warrant Book kept by the treasurer and auditor, of which it is really a counterpart.

Burial of Ex-Union Soldiers, Sailors and Marines. A law enacted in 1889 requires that the board of supervisors provide for the proper burial of ex-Union soldiers, sailors and marines, who die in the county without sufficient means, the burial to be in charge of some proper person and to be at a cost not to exceed fifty dollars. The person in charge of the burial is required to make a report on the condition and history of the man and his family, this report with the other facts in the case to be entered by the clerk in a book to be kept for that purpose.¹⁴

Equalization Records. The minutes of the board of supervisors when acting as a board of equalization are required by the provisions of the Political Code to be kept separate from the regular minutes, for under section 3682 of the Political Code the clerk is required to "record in a book to be kept for that purpose all changes, corrections and orders made by the Board" relative to equalization of assessments.¹⁵ These records are usually called Minutes of the Board of Equalization, although frequently the title appears as Orders of Cancellation of Erroneous Assessments. In many counties this provision for a separate book has been disregarded, these entries being placed in the regular Minute Book of the board. Often the petitions and certificates of cancellation themselves are also kept on file.

Franchise Book. Since 1872 the clerk has been required to keep a record of each franchise granted by the board of supervisors, stating for what purpose it was granted, length of time and to whom it was issued, the amount of bond and license tax required.¹⁶

Minutes. For the historian the minutes of the board of supervisors constitute the most valuable set of records in the office of the clerk. Since in them the clerk is required to record fully all resolutions and decisions and also the proceedings of all regular and special sessions of the board it can be seen that the value of the record, if properly kept, must depend upon the amount of business taken up by the board. As previously noted, the duties and powers of the board cover a wide field of activity.

The usefulness of these minutes will be recognized when it is remembered that they contain the record of the formation of townships, election precincts and school districts; election returns; the granting of franchises; the issuance of county bonds; the laying out of highways and building of bridges, school houses and county buildings; as well as the general supervision of all the activities of the county.

Ordinance Book. This book was first adopted in 1883 and, as its name implies, contains the record of all ordinances passed by the board of supervisors.¹⁷

Road Records. The Political Code, at the time of its adoption in 1872, prescribed that the clerk of the board should keep a book in which should be recorded all proceedings of the board relating to road districts, including orders laying out, altering, and opening roads. In a separate book he was required to keep a description of each road district, its overseers, roads, highways, contracts, and other matters pertaining thereto.¹⁸ By an amendment adopted in 1883 all of the data previously required to be placed in the book first mentioned was to be incorporated in the minutes of the board, in addition to which the clerk was to keep a road register in which must be entered the number and name of each public highway in the county, a general reference to its terminal points and course, also the date of the filing of the petitions or others papers, a memorandum of every subsequent proceeding in reference to it, with the date thereof, and the folio, and the volume of the minute book where it is recorded.¹⁹

In actual practice the road records show much less uniformity than might be expected. The common titles are Road Books, Road Minutes, Road Record and Road Register. These do not, however, indicate four different kinds of records, for an examination of the contents shows that the records usually fall into one of two classes. The first is a general road record and contains the minutes of supervisors and other similar entries relating to roads. It is, therefore, known as Minutes, Road Record or Road Book. The other is a record of each road or highway, the entries in regard to each road being assembled on one page in the form of a register. In keeping with its character this is usually known as the Road Register, although frequently known as Road Record. There are also in many cases deeds to highways, road petitions, maps of roads, and other records relating to highways.

MISCELLANEOUS RECORDS

In addition to the records already discussed, which the county clerk is required to keep by virtue of his position as clerk of the courts and of the board of supervisors, there are many others which arise from his general duties as clerk of the county. Some of these are difficult of classification, since they might be classed in numerous ways, but after careful consideration they have been arranged in six subdivisions. For the sake of convenience the naturalization records are also placed here, though these are, strictly speaking, court records. There are, therefore, seven groups of miscellaneous records, as follows: (1) Office routine and general duties; (2) Naturalization; (3) Registration; (4) Elections; (5) Marriage and public health; (6) Pertaining to private business concerns; (7) Relating to other officers.

OFFICE ROUTINE AND GENERAL DUTIES

Under this heading are grouped such records as the clerk's cash book, memorandum of accounts, fee book, special deposit record, and others of this general character. With the exception of the fee book, which is kept in some form by all clerks, there is but little uniformity in the titles or form of these records, although they are in general similar in nature. In addition to these financial records there are frequently others relating to correspondence, files of miscellaneous papers and the clerk's land register docket, under the Torrens Land Act. Other titles which deserve more extended treatment are considered in the following paragraphs.

Hunting and Fishing Licenses. The game law enacted March 13, 1907, required the county clerk to enter in a book kept for that purpose the name and resident address of every person to whom is issued a hunting license, and a description of such person, by age, height, race and color of eyes and hair. The 1909 law repeated this requirement. By an act of June 16, 1913, a similar provision is made regarding "Sporting fishing licenses." Other documents relating to game licenses, such as applications for licenses and license stubs, are also frequently kept by the clerks. They are, however, considered as merely temporary records and are usually soon destroyed.¹

Military Rolls and Military Tax. An act concerning the organization of the militia, approved April 10, 1850, provided that "all free, white, able-bodied male citizens, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, residing in this State, and not exempt by law, shall be subject to military duty." All who were not exempted by law, and not members of any volunteer or independent company, were required to pay to the county treasurer two dollars a year as a commutation for the nonperformance of military duty. Provision was made for enforcing the collection of this military tax. This law also required the assessor each year to make out a separate and distinct list of all persons subject to military duty and not exempt by law and not members of any volunteer or independent company. A certified copy of this list was to be sent to the adjutant general of the state and the original list deposited in the office of the county clerk.²

An act approved April 25, 1855, re-enacted the earlier section regarding those subject to military duty. It also required the assessor, as before, to make out a military list, a copy to be transmitted to the brigadier general of the brigade to which his county belonged, and the original to be deposited in the office of the county clerk. This law required the payment of a tax of twenty-five cents by each person on the military list for the support of the volunteer militia of the state. The assessor was to assess this tax and it was to be collected and returned in the same manner as other taxes.³ An amendatory act of April 10, 1856, increased the military tax to fifty cents and required the state controller to have uniform blank receipts printed and distributed to the various counties for use in the collection of this tax.⁴

⁴Stats. 1856:37.

An act approved May 9, 1861, repealed the previous laws regarding the militia but re-enacted the section regarding those subject to military duty. This law also required the assessor, as before, to make out the military list of the county, which list was to be delivered to the clerk of the board of supervisors. These provisions were repeated in the militia act of the following year.⁵ An amendatory and supplemental act passed in 1863 levied upon each male inhabitant of the state of the age of twenty-one years an annual tax of two dollars, to be known as the "military poll tax," to be assessed and collected in the same manner as the state poll tax. Volunteers in the United States army were exempted.⁶

The laws of 1855, 1861, and 1862 required the muster roll of each company to be filed with the clerk of the county in which it was located. In a few counties (as Solano and Yuba) were found muster rolls and other papers relating to military companies organized during the Civil War, and it is probable that a careful search of the miscellaneous files would bring to light similar records in other counties.

By the adoption of the Political Code in 1872 the previous laws regarding the militia were repealed or superseded. Sections 1895 to 2117 of the code as then adopted had to do with the state militia. Section 1897 required the assessor each year to make out a military roll for the county, as under the earlier laws, and to deliver the same to the clerk of the board of supervisors. The board of equalization must then correct the military roll at the same time as the assessment roll, and the clerk must send a copy of the corrected list to the brigadier general of the brigade to which his county belonged.⁷ In 1897 this was amended by requiring two copies of the roll to be delivered to the clerk of the board of supervisors, and in 1913 by requiring the military roll to be made up only in each odd-numbered year, and by substituting "Adjutant General of the state" for "Brigadier General of the brigade."⁸

NATURALIZATION

The federal naturalization laws give jurisdiction over naturalization matters to courts of record having a seal, a clerk and jurisdiction in actions in which the amount in controversy is unlimited. Under the old system of courts this business was transacted by the district and county courts; since 1880 it has been done by the superior court. In Los Angeles County all naturalization business has since June, 1915, been handled by the federal courts.

The first naturalization law, passed March 26, 1790, provided a very simple procedure. Citizenship might be conferred by any common law court of record upon a hearing in which it should be shown that the applicant had been at least two years a resident in the United States, and upon his taking the required oath of allegiance. No previous declaration of intention was necessary, but the clerk was required to record the application and proceedings thereon in the records of the court. No special record book seems to have been called for.⁹

The next law, passed January 29, 1795, made necessary the filing of a declaration of intention three years before the final application for admission, and also increased the residence requirement to five years. The same provisions were included for recording the proceedings as in the previous law.¹⁰ From that time until 1906 the plan of naturalization remained much the same, though there were variations in detail and some special enactments at different times.¹¹ So far as the records were concerned there were no material changes. While there was no specific requirement in the statutes for special record books, an examination of the records of the various courts in this state shows that special books were, in actual practice, kept for the recording of declarations of intention, petitions and certificates, and for naturalization indexes of various kinds.

A California state law passed in 1872 required the clerk of the court to provide two books, in one of which he should enter in alphabetical order the names of all persons who, from the organization of the court, had declared their intention to become citizens of the United States, together with the date of the declaration. In the other book he was required to enter in alphabetical order the names of all persons admitted by that court to citizenship in the United States, together with the name of the country of which each was before a citizen or subject; the date of admission and the page of the court record book containing the order admitting him.¹²

The federal naturalization law, approved June 29, 1906, required: (1) A declaration of intention, to be filed at least two years prior to admission; (2) A petition for naturalization, to be filed not less than two nor more than seven years after the declaration of intention; with this must also be filed a certificate of arrival for all aliens coming to this country after June 29, 1906; 3 An examination of the alien by the clerk at the time the petition is presented and a final hearing by the court, after notice, at which time the petition is either granted or rejected.

The blank forms for the declaration of intention, petition for naturalization and certificate of naturalization are furnished by the bureau at Washington. The permanent court records required by the law of 1906 are as follows: (1) The original declarations of intention, bound in volumes and numbered consecutively from volume to volume, beginning with number one in volume one; (2) The petitions for naturalization bound and numbered in similar fashion, together with a record of final orders upon the petitions for naturalization, which in the forms provided by the bureau is kept upon the back of the petition, this book being called "Petition and Record"; and (3) The stubs of the certificates of naturalization.¹³ These latter are not always preserved.

REGISTRATION

Poll Lists. These constituted the only official register of voters between 1850 and 1866 and were retained to supplement the Great Register between 1866 and 1872. The act to regulate elections, approved March 23, 1850, required the county judge to furnish to each inspector of elections for each election two copies of a blank form containing one column headed "Names of voters" and one column headed "Numbers of votes," with proper captions and certificates. At the time of holding the election the name of each person voting was to be entered on these blanks, together with the number. These poll lists were to be included with the election returns, one copy of which was to be preserved by the inspector for at least six months, and the other sent to the county clerk.¹⁴

The Registry act of 1866 did away with these earlier poll lists and provided for the preparation of poll lists before each election by a board of registration for each precinct. This board was to consist of one clerk and two judges to be elected or appointed to serve for a period of two years. The poll list was to be prepared during the ninety days preceding the election, and was to be completed on the thirtieth day preceding the election, after which it was to be sent to the county clerk, who had it printed, together with the other poll lists for the county. Copies of the printed lists were then sent to each clerk of election, and a final revision was made by the board of registration in the three days preceding the election. The poll list was to be made up from the uncanceled names on preceding poll lists, from the great register and from the oral applications of those entitled to be enrolled as electors for the election. The list was to contain columns for the number, name, date, age, class (whether native or naturalized), occupation and address of each person enrolled, and a column in which the fact of his having voted or his vote having been rejected should be noted at the time of the election. These lists, constituting a record of those who voted, were also to be included with the election returns, as in the case of the earlier poll lists. Prior to July 1, 1867, registration in the great register was not a necessary prerequisite to enrollment on the poll list; after that date it was, except in the case of persons naturalized, becoming of age or coming into the county within thirty-five days preceding the election.¹⁵

The Political Code in 1872 abolished these poll lists. In a note the Code Commissioners said: "We have abolished the poll list, . . . have made provision by which the great register will perform all the offices the poll lists were ever intended to perform. Experience has shown that the poll lists are prolific sources of fraud."¹⁶

Great Register. Before 1866 no adequate restrictions were placed upon prospective voters as is now done by the registration laws. This resulted in much confusion and frequent charges of corrupt practice whenever the elections were closely contested. The "Registry Act," so called because it required the registration of all prospective voters, was approved March 19, 1866. By its terms the county clerk was required to provide suitable books to be known as the "Great Register" in which were to be recorded the names of all domiciled inhabitants of the county who were qualified electors and legal voters thereof.

The form of the record and the manner of registration were set forth in the law and provided that clear and distinct entries should be made setting forth in separate columns the name of the person in full; his age; the country of his nativity; his occupation and exact residence; and if a naturalized citizen, further data regarding his naturalization were required. These statements were then to be sworn to by the person registered and that fact stated in the record. A further column was provided for the record of the cancelation of the entry, the cause of the cancelation being stated by either of the words "dead," "removed," "insane" or "infamous."¹⁷ To assist the county clerk in the registration of the voters the county assessor was required to enroll and return to the clerk the names of all unregistered persons entitled to registration. He was authorized to administer the oath in the same manner as the clerk, and for his work received a stated remuneration.¹⁸ In a few of the counties, as in Contra Costa and Humboldt, these assessors' returns have been preserved in the county archives.

An amendment to the "Registry Act," which did not materially affect the manner of keeping of the records, was adopted in 1868,¹⁹ but otherwise the original provisions were incorporated in the Political Code when it was adopted in 1872. At this time it was further provided that before the 5th of August, 1873, and every second year thereafter, each county clerk was to make out a copy of the uncanceled entries existing on the great register on the preceding first day of August. These names were to be arranged alphabetically according to surnames and numbered consecutively. These lists were then to be printed and copies distributed to each of the election precincts within the county and to certain other depositories, libraries and to electors applying for them. The clerk was also required to file and preserve all affidavits returned to him by the assessor or used before him for the purpose of obtaining registration.²⁰

By a statute of 1878 it was provided that all qualified voters should register anew in the counties of Fresno, Kern, Tulare, Stanislaus, Merced, Amador, Butte, Nevada and Siskiyou,²¹ and other amendments provided that in other counties the board of supervisors should have the power to require the new registration of voters whenever in their opinion the conditions demanded it.²²

In 1895 a more thorough change was made in the registration laws. The data required upon the affidavit made by the applicant was now extended to include the full name of the registered person; his business or occupation; his age, height, complexion, color of eyes and hair; place of residence (ward and precinct); time and place of naturalization, if naturalized; the date of entry; post-office address; and whether or not the applicant was able to read the constitution in the English language; to write his own name; and whether or not he was prevented by any physical disability from marking his ballot.²³

The clerk was now required to arrange the registration affidavits in precinct packages. At the end of the period of registration all these affidavits for the county were to be arranged alphabetically and the substance of them entered into separate precinct books.²⁴ From the data incorporated in these books printed copies of the great register were to be prepared either for the county as a whole or by precincts. In counties where it was not required that a new registration take place, supplemental registers were to be printed. These printed copies were then to be distributed among the officers, election boards, libraries, etc.²⁵ Since these contain all the data entered on the original affidavits they are a very valuable source of information.

Further amendments to the code in 1899 required that in all the counties of the state a new registration should be made on each even-numbered year. At this time a few changes were also made in the data required on the registration affidavits: complexion, and color of eyes and hair were omitted; while on the other hand, the state in which one was born was now required as well as country of nativity.²⁶

Within fifteen days after the close of registration the affidavits were to be arranged for each precinct alphabetically, in order of surnames. These, both originals and duplicates, were then to be bound into books and a printed index prepared for each book, the index to show names, ages, addresses and numbers of the voters as they appear in the precinct books.²⁷ In 1903, the Political Code was further amended to require that all affidavits of registration be preserved for at least five years from the date thereof, but that after the affidavits and duplicates had been preserved for that period they might, upon the order of the board of supervisors, be destroyed.²⁸

The keeping of the great register was discontinued by an amendment to the code approved April 19, 1909, which specifies that the affidavits shall constitute the register required to be kept for the registration of voters, and that the person charged with the registration of voters shall not copy the facts shown by the affidavits as a part of his duties.²⁹ These affidavits must be preserved for five years, but after that time may be destroyed. An index to the registration affidavits, giving numbers, names, ages, occupations and addresses, must be prepared within five days after the close of registration, and printed to the number of at least one hundred copies; a general index of all the precincts arranged alphabetically by precincts must then be made, one copy of which is to be kept in the clerk's office for public reference.³⁰

The adoption of woman's suffrage caused further changes to be made in the form of the registration affidavit. An amendment to the Political Code approved January 9, 1912, provides that the affidavit must show: the full name of the person; sex; occupation; height; country or state of nativity; exact place of residence; political affiliation, if any; place of naturalization, if naturalized; date and place of marriage and name of person to whom married, if citizenship was thereby acquired; the date of registration; post-office address; and ability to read the constitution, etc., as in the earlier affidavits.³¹

The registration law as it now stands is not materially different from the early acts and amendments of which it is the natural outgrowth. It provides for the complete registration of voters in each even-numbered year. The registration affidavits must be made in duplicate. The data required upon them, while not so full as under the earlier acts, is somewhat more explicit and requires that the affiant sign the affidavit with his or her accustomed signature. These affidavits themselves form the great register, the originals being arranged alphabetically by precincts and bound in this order, while the duplicates are filed in a strictly alphabetical manner without any regard to precincts. Indexes to the precinct books are prepared and printed, containing the numbers, names, occupations and addresses of the electors as they appear in the registration books. A general index of these books, arranged alphabetically by precincts, must be bound and at least one copy kept in the office of the county clerk for public reference.³²

The Great Register, since it included the names of all the voters in the county and gave a great amount of detailed information regarding each individual, can not be overlooked as a valuable source of information, both to the student of history and social science. It is, therefore, deeply to be regretted that it is no longer kept as a record and that even the affidavits may after a few years be destroyed. Some of the counties, realizing the value of this as a record, have provided for the continuation of the Great Register.

ELECTIONS

Election Returns. The act to regulate elections, approved March 23, 1850, provided that the election returns, consisting of the poll list and tallies, with a certificate attached thereto stating the number of votes each person received and the office to fill which such votes were cast, signed by the election officials, should be made up in duplicate, one set to be retained by the inspector and preserved for at least six months, the other set to be endorsed "Election Returns" and sent to the county clerk. The ballots were to be destroyed. The clerk was required, from the returns of the various precincts, to "estimate" the vote of the county and draw up and sign a statement of the same, containing the names of the officers voted for, the number of votes polled at each precinct by each candidate for the office, and the totals for the county, which statement was to be filed, together with the returns from each precinct, in the office of the court of sessions.³³ In 1855 the last phrase was amended to read "in the office of the county clerk."³⁴ In 1861 an important amendment was adopted, providing that the returns should be canvassed by the board of supervisors and the detailed statement of the result entered by the clerk upon the records of the board.³⁵

In 1863 the law was further amended by a requirement that the ballots, instead of being destroyed, should be strung on a thread or cord and enclosed with the returns sent to the county clerk. This enabled the board of supervisors to recount the ballots in case any elector so demanded. The ballots were to be kept by the clerk at least six months.³⁶ In the following year a record of challenges and oaths administered was required to be kept by the election officials and included with the election returns, but this law was repealed two years later.³⁷ In 1866 an amendment required the election board to keep, separate from the poll list, a list of voters, containing the names of all who voted, numbered consecutively on the left and with the poll list number placed to the right of each name. This list was to be included with the returns sent to the county clerk.³⁸

In 1872 the election laws, with some amendments, were incorporated in the Political Code adopted that year. These changes were as follows: The ballots were to be sealed up in an envelope separate from the other returns, but otherwise sent in as before, and to be kept, unopened, by the county clerk for twelve months and then, if not required by court actions, to be destroyed. The returns sent to the county clerk, under seal in charge of a member of the election board selected by lot, were to include the copy of the great register (which had now taken the place of the poll list) upon which the names of those voting had been marked, all certificates of registration received by the election board, the list of persons challenged, one copy of the list of voters and one copy of the tally list and list attached thereto. As soon as the returns were canvassed the clerk was required to take the copy of the register returned and file it in his office.³⁹

These provisions have remained in the code and are the present law with reference to election returns, except as herein noted. In 1899 and 1901 amendments were adopted which require that the election board must post outside of the polling place a copy of the result of the votes cast, and transmit one copy of the same, unsealed, to the county clerk, to be kept open to public inspection.⁴⁰ In 1899 a provision was inserted that any person desiring to vote shall write his name and address (or if unable to do so, have it written for him) on a roster of voters provided for that purpose, and in 1905 a new section was added to the code which requires that the roster of voters shall be sealed up by the election board and sent, in the same manner as the other returns, to the county clerk, who shall open all the rosters of voters and keep them open for public inspection for one year.⁴¹ In 1913 it was provided that the list of voters, tally list, etc., theretofore required to be retained by the inspector, shall be sent to the county clerk and by him kept open for public inspection for at least six months.⁴²

In a few of the counties are to be found election returns for the early periods. In Humboldt County especially they have been preserved for the years 1853 to 1872. Since they contain the names of voters in each precinct as well as the number of votes cast on each issue they are of great value. During recent years the election returns have ceased to be considered historical records and are kept only for a brief period for use in case of dispute. The Minutes of the Supervisors contain the result of the canvass of the returns and, in the absence of the returns themselves, constitute the most valuable record in reference to these matters.

Certificates of Nomination and Nomination Papers. These are temporary records and it is sufficient to consider them very briefly. Beginning with 1891 it is required that certificates of nomination made by conventions and nomination papers, including those filed for the purpose of getting the name of a candidate on either the primary or general election ballot, shall be filed, in the case of county offices, with the county clerk, who shall preserve them for two years and then destroy them.⁴³

Verification Deputies. Under the Primary law, since 1909, signatures to nomination papers have been secured by what are known as "Verification Deputies." These are persons appointed by a candidate or his proponents according to form prescribed by law. The document by which such verification deputies are appointed shall be filed with the county clerk.⁴⁴

Record of Nominations. The Primary Election law of 1911 contains a provision that the officer with whom nomination papers are filed shall keep a record in which he shall enter the names of all persons filing the same, the party, if any, and the time of filing. An amendment approved January 11, 1916, says that he shall enter the names of every person presenting nomination papers for filing, the name of the candidate, the title of the office, the party, if any, and the time of filing.⁴⁵

Record of Delegates Elected to Conventions. In the general primary law of 1897 a section is included providing that the clerk must, in a proper book, record the names of all delegates elected to conventions, with certain data in reference thereto. In 1899 this provision was incorporated in the Political Code, but in 1901 was repealed.⁴⁶

Other Election Records. In addition to those here described there are many others of more or less importance. Their names, however, in most cases indicate the nature of their contents. Among these should be mentioned maps and descriptions of precinct boundaries, the record of official ballots, record of election officers, statements of candidates' expenses, etc.

In Napa County was found a "Register of persons voting and when," covering the years 1876-1878. This is an interesting record, showing by means of columns, extending across double pages, the registry number, name of voter, age, occupation, citizenship (native or naturalized), residence, precinct voting in, with columns to show the record of the vote for a period of six years.

MARRIAGE AND PUBLIC HEALTH

Marriage Licenses. The Civil Code (March 21, 1872) first set down the requirement of a marriage license preceding the performance of the marriage ceremony, section 69 of which provided that the parties wishing to be married must first obtain a license from the clerk of the county court showing: (1) the identity of the parties; (2) the real and full names and places of residence; (3) that they are of sufficient age to be able to consent to marriage; (4) that if the male is under twenty-one or the female under eighteen, that the consent of the parent is given or that the party had been married before.

Two unimportant amendments were made in this section of the code⁴⁷ before 1905, when it was more thoroughly revised.⁴⁸ It is now required that the applicant must show upon oath the facts demanded in the earlier law, while marriages between certain races, or the marriage of imbeciles, insane persons or persons under the influence of intoxicants are forbidden.⁴⁹

There is no uniform rule followed by all the clerks in reference to marriage records. By some the stub-books, from which the license has been detached, are carefully preserved, but others make little attempt to preserve them. Many but not all retain the affidavits. The marriage records kept by the recorder are much more satisfactory.

Record of Medical Certificates. The first of a series of acts regarding the registration of persons engaged in professions having to do with the public health of the people of the state was enacted April 3, 1876, creating a state board of examiners who were to grant medical certificates to such persons as were qualified to practice medicine. These certificates were to be recorded in the office of the county clerk in the county in which the physician had his practice; and for this purpose the clerk was to keep a book which would contain a complete list of the certificates recorded by him.⁵⁰ In 1901 this act was replaced by a new law providing for a board of medical examiners but prescribing for the county clerk duties similar to those previously required.⁵¹

Register of Dentists. On March 12, 1885, an act requiring the registration of dentists was passed. A board of examiners was created to pass upon the qualifications of applicants and it was made unlawful for dentists who were not already practicing to begin practice without first obtaining a license. Practicing dentists were required to file their names for registration with the county clerk within a period of six months, and all new applicants who had been granted licenses were to register before beginning their practice. For this purpose the county clerk was required to keep a book to be known as the "Register of Dentists." An amendment was made to the act in 1893, and a more complete change in 1901, but neither affected the manner of keeping the clerk's record.⁵²

On March 20, 1903, further changes were made, among them being the requirement that the applicant give his name, age, office address and number of his license; and in addition file an affidavit that he is the party mentioned in the license. The affidavits were also to be placed on file in a bound volume.⁵³

Register of Osteopaths. On March 9, 1901, the State Board of Osteopathic Examiners was created, with power to pass upon the qualifications of persons applying for osteopathic licenses. These licenses were to be recorded with the county clerk in a manner similar to other medical licenses in a book known as the "Register of Osteopaths."⁵⁴ On March 14, 1907, the State Board of Medical Examiners was reorganized to include members of the Osteopathic Association and to them was given the power to grant licenses to osteopaths. The clerk was required to keep a record of all certificates filed with him. These are kept in the same volume known above as the "Register of Osteopaths."⁵⁵

Register of Optometrists. On March 20, 1903, the California State Board of Examiners in Optometry was created. Certificates were to be granted by them to persons qualified to practice optometry. These were to be presented to the county clerk for record and placed in a record book provided especially for that purpose.⁵⁶

Register of Pharmacists. The State Board of Pharmacy was created in 1891 but the law required no records of licenses to be kept

PERTAINING TO PRIVATE BUSINESS CONCERNS

Articles of Incorporation. All the laws regarding corporations have required the filing of the articles of incorporation, but before 1872 there was no uniformity as to the place where they should be filed.⁵⁸ In the majority of cases they were to be filed in the office of the county clerk, but in some instances it was required that a certified copy should also be filed in the office of the secretary of state; while in other cases the original articles were to be filed in the office of the secretary of state.⁵⁹ In a few cases the articles were to be filed in the office of the county recorder.⁶⁰

In 1872 the corporation laws were codified in the Civil Code and it was provided that all articles of incorporation shall be filed in the office of the county clerk of the county where the business of the corporation is to be transacted and a copy filed in the office of the secretary of state.⁶¹

These articles of incorporation are of great value to any person interested in the history of any incorporated body such as business companies, churches, fraternal societies, private schools, etc. They usually contain a statement of the purpose of the organization or its constitution and by-laws, the names of its directors or officers, if not its whole membership, the date of organization, and other information of this character. In many cases later documents are filed or recorded showing changes in officers and containing financial and statistical reports. As a usual thing the original articles are filed, although in some cases they have been copied in full into a record book. An index to corporations almost invariably accompanies these articles.

Rural Cemetery Associations. In 1859 a law was passed providing for the organization of such associations. The officers were required to file with the county clerk a certificate (similar to articles of incorporation), which certificate the clerk shall record "in a book appropriated to the recording of articles of incorporation."⁶²

Bond and Surety Companies. In 1907 an amendment to the Political Code required the county clerk to keep as one of his records a volume to be labeled "Bond and Surety Companies," the pages of which must be divided into columns for entering the name of the corporation, name of state, territory or country under whose laws it is organized, date of the certificate to do business in this state, date of surrender, revocation, etc., of such certificate, date of new authority to do business.⁶³

Firms Under Fictitious Names. The Civil Code in 1872 provided that on a change of membership in a firm continuing the use of a partnership name the person acquiring the right to use such partnership name must file with the county clerk a certificate stating the name of each person dealing under such name and the place of residence of each member. The clerk was required to keep a register in which he must enter in alphabetical order the name of every such partnership and of each partner therein.⁶⁴ In 1874 amendments to the code made these provisions more specific. It is required that every person or partnership doing business under a fictitious name must file with the county clerk a certificate stating the name and residence of each member. The clerk must keep a register in which must be entered in alphabetical order the name of every person doing business under a fictitious name and the name of every such partnership and of each partner thereof.⁶⁵

RELATING TO OTHER OFFICERS

In addition to those records that pertain to the duties of the clerk himself, his archives usually contain many records of, or relating to, other officers, which have come into his possession as clerk of the county and therefore custodian of many documents and reports.

Federal Census Returns. The act of March 23, 1850, which provided for the taking of the seventh and subsequent censuses of the United States required that "Each assistant shall, within one month after the time specified for the enumeration, furnish the original census returns to the clerk of the county court of their respective counties, and two copies, duly compared and corrected, to the marshal of the district."

For the census of 1860 there were no changes made in the law, as the only legislation regarding the taking of the census was contained in the appropriation acts. Before the census of 1870, an act was passed amending the law of 1850 by extending the time for making the reports and making a few minor changes.⁶⁶

Since the census of 1850 was taken before the counties of California were fully organized it is but a natural consequence of the time that none of the returns of that year are to be found in the county archives. There are, however, reasons for disappointment in that not more of these returns for 1860 and 1870 have survived. For the former year, only Del Norte and Yuba have preserved them; for 1870, Alameda, Humboldt, San Francisco and Santa Barbara. The great value of these returns to the historical worker is too well known to require much stress. An examination of the published census reports indicates the wide range of information gathered by the census marshals. It should, however, be noted that these original returns contain not only the facts shown in the published reports but much more detailed information as well, for in them the unit is the individual, not the state or county.⁶⁷ At the time of the census of 1880 a new act was passed, section 6 of which requires:⁶⁸

“Each enumerator, immediately after completing the enumeration of the population of his district and before forwarding the same to the supervisor, to make and file in the office of the clerk of the county court or in the office of the court or board administering the affairs of the county to which his district belongs a list of the names, with age, sex, and color, of all persons enumerated by him, which he shall certify to be true.”

The laws for all the later censuses have omitted this requirement. Three counties, Humboldt, San Joaquin and Santa Barbara, contain these lists. Since they are merely lists of names they are of little value as compared with the returns of the earlier censuses.

Humane Officers. Section 607*f* of the Civil Code provides a method for the appointment of humane officers by bodies incorporated for the purpose of prevention of cruelty to animals, subject to the approval of the judge of the superior court. An amendment to this section, adopted in 1913, provides that the county clerk shall enter in a book called the “Record of Humane Officers,” the name of every officer so appointed, the number of his badge, name of the corporation appointing him, and date of filing of the appointment.⁶⁹ While these books are to be found in most of the counties, they, as a rule, contain very few entries.

Justice Court Dockets. As the name implies, this is a docket kept by the justice of the peace. Since the law does not require that all justice court dockets be deposited with the county clerk these records are not to be found in all the counties, and even where they are found they are usually incomplete, both as regards the period of time and portions of the county covered. For the earlier years they have been found to be of greater value historically than the records of more recent years.

Other Records. Besides the records above enumerated, a number of others are frequently found, for whose presence in the clerk's office there seems to be no very specific statutory or code provision. Among the more important of these the following should be noted: Notarial records; Coroner's registers; Public administrator's register, and various other reports and account books.

⁶⁷In this connection it should be noted that a full set of the returns of the Federal Census of 1860 is to be found in the archives of the secretary of state, at Sacramento. The same archives also contain the returns of the state census of 1852.

THE RECORDER

GENERAL PROVISIONS

One of the two most important record officers in the county is the recorder, for though he does not have the variety of duties and records that pertain to the clerk, his records are just as essential in a well ordered system of government. While the duties of the clerk are largely administrative and his records are accumulated as a result of his administrative activity, the recorder is essentially an archivist, his chief and only duty being to see that the instruments presented to him are properly transcribed into permanent record books or otherwise safely filed.

Since 1850, when the office was created, the duties have gradually been increased through statutory provisions requiring that additional kinds of instruments be recorded. The act which created the office of county recorder, set forth his duties to be as follows:

“The Recorder shall have the custody of and shall safely keep and preserve all the books, records, deeds, maps, and papers deposited and kept in his office, and it shall be his duty to record or cause to be recorded correctly:

1st. All deeds, mortgages, releases of mortgage, conveyances, deeds of trust, bonds, covenants, powers of attorney, leases, transcripts of judgments, or other instruments of writing, whereby any real estate is conveyed or may be affected, which shall have been proved or acknowledged according to law and authorized to be recorded.

2nd. All papers and documents found in or transmitted to their respective offices, of and concerning lands or tenements, and which were received from the Mexican authority at the change of government.

3rd. All marriage contracts and certificates of marriage.

4th. All commissions and official bonds required by law to be recorded in their offices.

5th. All transcripts of judgments from the District and Justices' Courts which by law are made liens upon real estate and matter of record.”

Other sections provided that “the several classes of instruments of writing mentioned in the several subdivisions of the preceding section shall be recorded in separate books, according to their classification therein,” and that in addition to the documents above mentioned the recorder should also keep a set of books “for the registration of the separate property of the wife, and shall record all instruments in writing relating thereto, in the manner prescribed in this Act for the recording of other instruments required to be recorded.”

Since 1850 many other kinds of records have been added to the list of documents authorized or required to be recorded. In 1851 the following five sets of records were specified in addition to those previously named: Wills admitted to probate, mechanics' liens, notices of attachment on real estate, notices of pendency of an action affecting real estate, and notices of pre-emption claims.²

At the time of the adoption of the Political Code in 1872 a list of instruments which must on application be recorded was incorporated. This list is practically the same as that adopted in the statute of 1851, with the addition of the following titles: grants, mortgages of personal property, and births and deaths.³ The provisions of the present code are as follows:⁴

“He must, upon the payment of his fees for the same, record, separately, in a fair hand, or typewriting, in large and well-bound separate books, either sewed books or an insertable leaf, which when placed in the book cannot be removed:

1. Deeds, grants, transfers, and mortgages of real estate, releases of mortgages, powers of attorney to convey real estate, and leases which have been acknowledged or proved.

2. Mortgages of personal property.

3. Certificates of marriage and marriage contracts.

4. Wills admitted to probate.

5. Official bonds.

6. Notices of mechanics' liens.

7. Transcripts of judgments, which by law are made liens upon real estate in this state.

8. Notices of attachments upon real estate.

9. Notices of the pendency of an action affecting real estate, the title thereof, or the possession thereof.

10. Instruments describing or relating to the separate property of married women.

11. Notices of pre-emption claims.

12. Births and deaths.

13. Certified copies of decrees and judgments of courts of record; and,

14. Such other writings as are required or permitted by law to be recorded.”

Realizing that the documents must not only be copied into books but that they must be carefully and permanently preserved and also made readily accessible to the public, the legislation on the subject has always specified that the recorder shall keep “suitable well bound books, wherein shall be recorded in fair and legible hand all instruments of writing authorized or required to be recorded.”⁵ Other sections required the keeping of an index to each volume of records as well as a general index.⁶ Since the indexes are so constantly used by attorneys and searchers of titles they are as a rule prepared and preserved with as much care as the records themselves. With the changes brought about through the invention of the typewriter and insertable leaf record books the statutes were modified to permit the use of these new forms.⁷

PRE-STATEHOOD RECORDS

From the historical point of view the most interesting documents in the archives of the counties are those dealing with the period before the formation of the state government in California. Since these are unique in character and are of such great value they have been listed separately in the main body of this report. While not all of the volumes or documents listed as pre-statehood records are to be found in the office of the recorder, the greater part of them are so located; it is therefore appropriate that they be considered in connection with the records of that office. They may be divided into four classes: the first two divisions, which are almost entirely in Spanish, contain records relating to the Spanish and Mexican periods; the others for the period of conquest, 1846-1848; and the gold era, 1849-1850.

Early Spanish Period. Fortunately there have been preserved in our local depositories records pertaining to that period when the first Europeans took possession of what they then called Alta California. Although but fragments of the original great body of records, they nevertheless constitute a most valuable source of information regarding conditions and events during that most distant past. The great bulk of the official Spanish manuscript documents relating to California, which came into the possession of the United States upon the transfer of sovereignty from Mexico, were placed in the custody of the United States surveyor-general, bound in some three hundred volumes, and housed in San Francisco. Unfortunately the great fire of 1906 destroyed all but about a score of these volumes and left the remainder in a condition which renders them almost incapable of use.

Before the disaster which so nearly wiped out the archives of the surveyor-general, a portion of the documents had been returned to the separate counties. With the loss of the general archives the importance of these smaller, less complete collections has been increased. The researches of this commission have shown that records of this character are to be found among the archives of several of the counties and cities. The largest and undoubtedly the most valuable of the local collections is that in the archives of the recorder of Monterey County. This collection consists of sixteen volumes of bound documents dating from 1781 to 1850. In most cases these are the original documents and were bound while in the possession of the surveyor-general. They include the official reports of the local Spanish governmental and mission authorities, letters, addresses, proclamations and records of petty court proceedings. Since Monterey was for many years the capital of Alta California these documents doubtless contain much very valuable information. In the county archives at Santa Cruz are to be found somewhat more than five hundred original documents covering the period from 1797 to 1845 similar in character to those just described. Search in the other county archives met with disappointment, for in many, where it was expected that Spanish records would be located, none were to be found. In some places, however, a search revealed documents of a similar character in the city archives; this was especially the case in San Jose, one of the old pueblos of the Spanish regime. In the vault of the clerk of that city were found six volumes labeled "San Jose Archives." These contain original documents dating from 1792 or earlier down to the end of the Mexican period. The unsystematic manner in which the documents were bound prevented anything like an accurate description of the range of subject matter or dates covered in these volumes, except by a more complete examination than was possible in this preliminary survey. That these collections of documents will prove most valuable to the student of Spanish provincial and local history there can be no doubt.

Mexican Régime. As might be expected the records relating to the period of Mexican control are much more numerous and varied in their nature. These documents may be grouped into two general classes: First, those relating to land titles; and second, those which were formed as result of the administration of the government. The former are more widely distributed among the counties, but the latter are more varied in their character. The two most important collections of records relating to this period to be found in the local archives are in those of Los Angeles and San Francisco. In Los Angeles, one volume, "Record Book A," contains alcalde documents covering the dates following 1825. Accompanying it are volumes of documents relating to the prefecture of Los Angeles from 1834 down to the American period. With these are other documents apparently of more local character which are in the custody of the clerk. In addition to these records in the county archives, there are other volumes for the same period in the archives of the city, among them being minutes of the ayuntamiento, land petitions and financial records. In San Francisco the number of records extant for this period is greater than in Los Angeles, although it is doubtful that they are as important historically, since they relate almost entirely to land titles and matters of a local nature.

Other records in Monterey, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, Sonoma and elsewhere deal almost entirely with land titles during these years. In contrast to these land records which may appear to be more or less uninteresting is a book of unique character in the archives of Monterey County, namely the "Record of Official Acts of Thomas O. Larkin." Although the record itself is short, it gives an excellent idea of the varied nature of the duties of Larkin as consular agent of the United States government in California, when it was still under control of a foreign power.

Period of American Conquest, 1846-48. Records dealing with events during the period of the conquest of Alta California by the United States forces are to be found in the archives of Los Angeles, Monterey, San Francisco and Sonoma, the chief centers of interest during those years. In Los Angeles and Monterey these are in the form of documents bound together with those of the earlier regimes; in San Francisco and Sonoma, on the other hand, they are more voluminous and maintain their identity in separate volumes. In San Francisco the greater part of these relate to land matters, being either the register of property acquired under the Mexican government, or the record of sale by the local alcalde or magistrate, as in the case of alcalde grants and the sale of beach and water lots. But there are some miscellaneous records which contain items of more than common interest and an occasional book of peculiar character, such as the ledger of Alcalde Bartlett for the year 1846-47, which appears to be a full financial report of the receipts and expenditures of the local government for this period. The Sonoma records are of interest in view of the importance of that place as a settlement and of the part taken by it and its inhabitants during and following the Bear Flag revolt in June, 1846. They consist of a docket of the Justice Court at Sonoma, August, 1846-April, 1847, alcalde records, land claim records and deed books.

The Gold Era, 1849-50. The era of the conquest was quickly followed by the discovery of gold and the resultant influx of population. The transition period was short, the balance being shifted rapidly from the old easy-going Spanish way of doing to the more aggressive Anglo-Saxon mode of life. As a consequence many of the records show no break whatever; until the adoption of the state constitution in 1849 the forms of local government were not changed from the earlier system. The local records during this period are therefore most interesting and valuable, for they show how the invading Americans took control and adapted to their use the existing institutions, especially the office of alcalde and the court of first instance, both of which were essentially Spanish in nature. Unlike anything in the Anglo-Saxon form of government, the powers and duties of the alcalde were extensive and to some extent autocratic. The following description of the alcalde is well illustrated in the documents in the county archives:

“Studying his multifarious functions, we discover with admiration, not unmixed with awe, that one and the same person was often supreme judge, clerk of court, town-constable, sheriff, recorder, treasurer, justice of the peace, land-officer, government-agent in land deliveries, superintendent of roads, town board of health, board of school-trustees, arbitrator in petty disputes, general advisory board for young and old, and even, near the coast, judge in admiralty to pronounce upon all marine cases.”¹

Although the records of many of these interesting officials have doubtless long since disappeared, there are preserved in the county archives dockets, ledgers, and other records originally belonging to the alcaldes. The counties in which alcaldes' records have been found are as follows: Contra Costa, El Dorado, Marin, Monterey, Napa, Sacramento, San Francisco, San Luis Obispo, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, Sonoma, Sutter, and Yuba.

The records of courts of first instance are found in many cases to accompany the records of the alcaldes. In Los Angeles and Santa Clara they date from 1847, but in the other cases they are for the period following September, 1849, when by Governor Riley an attempt was made to put into execution the full form of government as prescribed by the laws of Mexico.² These are to be found in Sacramento, San Joaquin and Solano counties.

RECORDS RELATING TO PROPERTY TITLES

Unquestionably the most important records to be found in the office of the county recorder are those relating to property titles. Since it is recognized that the security of the title of property depends very largely upon its being recorded in the proper manner, practically a full record of property transfers is to be found in these archives. For the convenience of this discussion the records relating to the title of property have been subdivided into three classes: first, those dealing with the acquisition of the original title; second, those relating to the transfer and encumbrance of property; and third, miscellaneous property records.

ACQUISITION OF ORIGINAL TITLE

Land Claims. From the historical point of view those records which relate to the original acquisition of the land are of great value in showing the beginnings of settlement in a new region. In those parts of the state that were not covered by Spanish and Mexican land grants this process is shown in the records of claims for pre-emption or possessory rights, school lands, and swamp and overflowed lands. Although the public lands of California were not open to pre-emption under the federal law until 1853, the legislature, as early as April 11, 1850, passed an act recognizing the right to title of any person occupying or settling upon land belonging to the United States.¹ Since 1851 the recorder has been required to keep a separate record for these pre-emption or possessory claims.² By numerous federal enactments lands had been ceded to the states for educational and other purposes. Through these, California came to control a very large share of that part of the public domain which lay within its borders.³ By a law adopted May 3, 1852, it was provided that the state school lands should be disposed of by means of land warrants, which were sold to individuals who located them upon unoccupied government land. The owner of these school land warrants selected the amount due him through the county surveyor and the action was entered in the record of school lands or school land surveys. This system of land warrants was found unsatisfactory and after 1858 the law was repealed. The state school lands were then located and sold by the state agents in a more direct manner.⁴

Swamp and Overflowed Lands. The swamp and overflowed lands granted to the state by the act of September 28, 1850,⁵ were first put on sale in 1855, the survey of the land being made by the county surveyor upon petition of the applicant. The record of this survey, together with the claim to the land, was filed with the county recorder.

Spanish Land Grants. In those counties where land was held under a former Spanish or Mexican title the process of acquiring titles was naturally very different. The basis of the claim in those cases was the Spanish or Mexican grant. In many cases the original grant, together with lengthy expedientes showing how the grant had been acquired, are preserved in the county archives. Among the volumes listed as pre-statehood records are to be found many books and documents which deal with these early land grants. In other cases the grants are recorded in the early volumes of deeds.

Patents. All title to land is based primarily upon the patent of the United States government whether the land was sold directly to the individual or through the state land office. There is, therefore, in every recorder's office a record of patents. This record contains in each case a brief history of the piece of land together with the patent granting the land described to the patentee. In the case of the old Spanish ranchos the patent is usually accompanied by a history of the grant under the Spanish and Mexican regimes. They are invariably accompanied also by a map of the rancho.

Mining Claims. Of a somewhat different nature and yet closely related to real estate titles are the mining and water claims, for in them the person acquiring title secures only the right to use the land for a certain specified purpose. The mining records are by far the more numerous and on account of the unique position of mining in early California history also the more interesting historically. The record of mining claims usually contains a notice setting forth the name of the claim and that of the locator with date, size and description. In some of the leading mining counties these are entered in separate books divided as to quartz claims, placer claims, etc., with further titles for other kinds of mining records. In the counties less given to mining the records are more simple if they are found at all.

Special attention should be given to the mining district records. These are of great historical value, since they show not only the extent of territory covered in the early days of mining operations but also the ideas these rugged pioneers had of law and government, for each of these mining districts was to a large extent a government by itself. The miners met, outlined the boundaries of the district, and determined the manner in which claims should be acquired and held. Most of these district records were kept only by a district recorder and in probably a large majority of cases the records have been lost. In some cases the mining district records, together with filings for claims in such districts, were handled by the county recorder as a part of the county records. In these cases they were recorded in books devoted entirely to mining claims or are to be found in Deeds, Miscellaneous Records, or similar record books. By a law approved March 27, 1897, all mining district recorders and custodians of records of the several mining districts in the state were required to transmit to the county recorder all records of the district, the recorder being considered the legal custodian of such records. As result of this act many district record books have been deposited with the county recorders, but it is very probable that many of these records are still outside of the county archives.

Water Rights. Records regarding the appropriation of water rights begin with the adoption of the Civil Code in 1872, it being provided in section 1415 of that code that a person desiring to appropriate water must post a notice at the point of intended diversion, stating his claim to the water to the amount desired, the purpose for which claimed and the place of intended use, and the means by which he intended to divert it, together with a statement of the size of the flume or pipe.

Within ten days after posting the notice by the claimant he must present a copy of the same to be recorded by the recorder of the county within which it was posted.⁶ This the recorder was required to record in a volume kept for that purpose. Appropriations of water are now governed by the act of August 10, 1913, which created the state water commission. This act made the process of securing water rights much more complicated and there have been relatively few rights recorded under its provisions.⁷

Oyster Beds. An act of April 28, 1851, permitted the planting of oysters in any of the waters of the state below low water mark, if there was not already a natural growth of oysters there. Natural oyster beds were not to be staked off. No one was to be permitted to enter any waters marked off as oyster beds, provided these did not impede the free navigation of the streams. There was no requirement that the location of these beds be filed with any official.⁸ On April 2, 1866, an act was approved which permitted the discoverer of an oyster bed to appropriate the same to his own use and benefit. Within ten days after the discovery he was to stake off the bed and file a description of the same in the county or counties wherein it was located.⁹ The provisions of these two acts were embodied in a new act passed March 30, 1874, entitled "An act to encourage the planting and cultivation of oysters." This act permitted any citizen of the United States to lay down and plant oysters in any of the public waters of the state, provided they did not thereby obstruct navigation. The locator was to display a conspicuous sign marking the oyster beds, and to stake off and fence the lands used for this purpose. Full description of the bed was then to be filed with the recorder in the county wherein the bed was located. The recorder was then to record the same in a book entitled "Record of Oyster Beds."¹⁰

TRANSFER AND ENCUMBRANCE OF TITLE

Deeds. The transfer of property may be made either by voluntary agreement on the part of the former owner or it may be done by legal process. Those documents that effect a permanent transfer of property by agreement of the former holder of the title are usually known as deeds, conveyances for real estate, or bills of sale for personal property.

By far the most extensive series of volumes to be found in the recorder's office is that devoted to the recording of deeds. It is also, from nearly every standpoint, the most important, and consequently the one most constantly referred to. For these reasons greater attention has been given by officials to the deed books and they, together with their all-important indexes, are practically without exception in good usable condition and well cared for. It is to be noticed that in several counties during the first few years the different kinds of records were not all segregated into separate volumes, but were recorded together in a book labeled simply "Records." When, finally, different books came to be used for different kinds of instruments, these early volumes of Records were generally numbered as the first volumes of Deeds, since deeds composed the greater part of their contents. The result is that many of these early deed books might more accurately be described as Miscellaneous Records. At all times the term Deeds has been used in a comprehensive sense to include all instruments by which title to land is transferred. In recent years it has become quite customary to put deeds of trust into a separate series, and in many counties, particularly where the quantity of records is large, it is usual to devote certain volumes of the regular deed series to special kinds of deeds—trust, reconveyance, mining, etc., for which frequently printed forms are used—and to use form books numbered in the regular series for deeds executed by certain land companies doing a large volume of business.

Wills and Decrees of Distribution. When transfers are made by bequest the documents relating to the change in title may be found in the records connected with probate proceedings. In those cases involving the title to real estate the record is kept in the recorder's office in addition to the record of the probate court. Forty of the counties have separate volumes entitled "Wills" or "Wills admitted to probate." There is also to be found in the archives of the recorders of about one-third of the counties a separate record known as Decrees of Distribution or Decrees of Partition containing a copy of probate decrees by which an estate has been divided among the heirs. In about half the counties a separate index is kept for these documents, although the decrees themselves are recorded in books devoted to deeds or miscellaneous records.

The Torrens System. By an act approved March 17, 1897, what is known as the Torrens system of certification of land titles is provided for in this state. With the exception of a few counties, notably Los Angeles, San Diego and San Francisco, land owners have not very generally availed themselves of the provisions of this act. The law provides that the recorder of each county be the registrar of titles for that county. Land is brought under the act by the filing with the clerk of a verified petition to the superior court by the owner of any estate or interest in such land. This petition must contain detailed information necessary for the establishment of the title. The clerk is required to endorse on this petition the exact time of its presentation and enter it in a book kept for that purpose and known as the Land

Register Docket. This petition is examined by the court and, after proper notice has been given and published, a date is set for a hearing, at which time all interested in the land in question may appear and be heard either for or against the granting of the petition. At the conclusion of this hearing action is taken by the court. If the petition is granted a decree of the court is issued setting forth the fact and including a description of the land and a statement of all liens and incumbrances upon it with particulars of the same.

Upon the filing of a certified copy of this decree the registrar is required to issue in duplicate a certificate of title, the original to be kept by the registrar and the duplicate given to the owner. The registrar must keep a book called Register of Titles, in which he must enter all original certificates of title, in the order of their numbers, with appropriate blanks for the entry of memorials and notations. Each certificate with its accompanying blanks shall constitute a separate folium of such book. All instruments, notices and papers required or permitted to be filed in the office of the registrar shall be retained and kept in the office and removed only upon proper court order. Certified copies may, however, be made. When registered land is sold or otherwise transferred, a new certificate is issued and the old one canceled.

Besides the Register of Titles, the registrar is required to keep two indexes: (1) A Property Index, with pages divided into columns for entering the section or subdivision, range or block, township or lot, and any other description necessary to identify the land, the name of the registered owner, the volume and page of the register in which the land is registered; (2) a Name Index, divided into columns showing in alphabetical order the names of all registered owners and all other persons interested in or holding charges against registered land, the nature of the interest, description of the land, the volume and page of the register in which the land is registered. The act requires the use of a uniform system of books, blanks and forms prepared by the attorney-general, state controller and secretary of state.¹¹

In 1915 this law was superseded by another initiated and adopted at the November election. The new law, which was simply a revision of the act of 1897, removed some objectionable features and introduced some new features with the result that the system is much more attractive. The two most important changes may be noted very briefly: (1) doing away in large numbers of cases with the requirement for abstracts and special maps in plans of surveys; (2) the provision for a "Torrens title assurance fund," which is in effect state title insurance for land registered under the act.¹²

Leases and Mortgages. Temporary transfers or encumbrances upon property are made by means of leases and mortgages. The nature of both of these is so well known that they require no explanation here. Practically all the counties have separate sets of records for each of these classes of documents. In the case of mortgages there has been an increasing tendency to differentiate those relating to real estate from chattel or crop mortgages.

Although mortgages on personal property have been permitted since the first session of the state legislature, formerly they were very much more limited than at present.¹³ By subsequent legislation the early restrictions placed upon chattel mortgages have gradually been removed. By the act of May 11, 1853, certain personal property mortgages were declared to have the same effect as mortgages upon real estate. The kinds of personal property specified, however, confined the mortgage to possessory claims to public lands, buildings and improvements upon such lands, quartz claims, and such other personal property as was by its structure fixed to the soil.¹⁴

On April 29, 1857, an amendment was passed enlarging the list of personal property subject to mortgage and since that time many acts have been passed with the same purpose in view.¹⁵ Upon the adoption of the Civil Code in 1872, the list was incorporated into the code with some additions, the most important being that relating to growing crops. It was also at this time provided that mortgages of personal property must be recorded both in the county in which the mortgager resides and in the county in which the mortgaged property is situated, or to which it may be removed. This requirement is still retained in the code.¹⁶ In practically all the counties chattel mortgages are given a separate set of records. In about a dozen counties crop mortgages are placed in separate volumes.

Releases, Satisfactions and Assignments. Releases and satisfactions of mortgages and leases are usually recorded in a set of volumes different from the mortgages and leases themselves; however, upon this point there is no uniformity. About one-half of the counties have a set for the releases or satisfactions of mortgages, while about one-third include both mortgages and leases in the same record book.

In practically all of the counties a separate volume is kept for the purpose of recording assignments. In general these are entitled assignments of mortgages and leases, although they frequently include assignments of agreements and judgments as well. In 1872 the Political Code provided that an assignment of a mortgage might be recorded, in which case the record became a notice to all persons subsequently deriving title from the assignor.¹⁷ In many cases assignments of leases are recorded in the same volume with the assignments of mortgages, although frequently separate volumes are used.

The law requires that an index be kept labeled "Assignments of Mortgages and Leases—Assignors," each page of which must be divided into four columns showing: assignors, assignees, instruments assigned, and when and where recorded. In similar manner another index must be kept in which the names of assignees will be placed in the first column and arranged alphabetically.¹⁸

Of somewhat different character are assignments in bankruptcy or assignments for benefit of creditors. It is provided in the Civil Code that an assignment for the benefit of creditors must be recorded and an inventory filed with the recorder.¹⁹

Homesteads. In a negative manner the records relating to homestead exemptions should be included with the records dealing with encumbrance to property titles. Under an act passed in 1851 the legislature decreed that under certain conditions the homestead, consisting of a quantity of land together with the dwelling house thereon and its appurtenances not exceeding in value $5,000, selected by the owner, should not be subject to forced sale on execution or to any other fund process from a court for debts contracted after the passage of the act.²⁰ Amendments made in 1860 extended and modified the terms of the original act.²¹

At that time it was required that the person or persons asking for the homestead right should have the declaration acknowledged and recorded as any other conveyances affecting the transfer of real estate. A separate record was to be provided for these homestead declarations. In like manner the declaration of abandonment of homestead was required to be acknowledged and recorded. Another act extended the privilege of the homestead act to unmarried persons and required that the applicant, upon receiving the homestead title, should have it recorded in the office of the county recorder in a book to be called Register of Homesteads of Single Persons. In ten counties abandonments of homesteads are recorded in a separate volume or series of volumes. In all other counties homestead records of all kinds are recorded in a single series and indexed in the same way.

Tax Sales. Not all transfers of title result from the voluntary action of the former holder, for on account of the nonpayment of taxes or assessments for public improvements the state or some of its subdivisions may seize the property, or for other causes similar result may be obtained by private action in the civil courts.

The method of enforcing the collection of taxes on real property has been the subject of frequent legislative enactment since the creation of the state government in 1850. There is no purpose here to enter into a history of the legislation upon the subject, but merely to outline it as briefly as possible, with particular reference to its bearing upon the records of the recorder.

Under the first revenue bill, approved March 30, 1850, it was provided that the treasurer should collect the taxes. No publication of a delinquent tax list was required, it being merely provided that if the taxes on real property were not paid by the required date the property should be sold, after notice, by the treasurer. The treasurer was to execute a deed of conveyance to the purchaser, acknowledge the same and file it in the office of the recorder. The property might be redeemed within a year, but if not so redeemed the deed became absolute.²² The following year the sheriff was made ex officio tax collector, the provisions for the sale of real property for taxes remaining otherwise the same. After the sale the sheriff was required to execute a certificate of conveyance to the purchaser and deposit the same in the office of the recorder. After the expiration of a year, if the property was not in the meantime redeemed, the sheriff was to make a deed to the purchaser.²³ The revenue act of 1852 declared, as had the previous one, that every assessment is a judgment and has the force of an execution against the property and party liable for taxes. The sheriff was required to seize and after notice sell property on which taxes remained unpaid. There seems to have been no specific provision made for redemption.²⁴ In 1853 the provisions for sale of real estate for taxes were in general the same as in 1851, but now the sheriff, after the sale, was required to execute a certificate of conveyance of sale and deliver a certified copy to the purchaser. The recorder, on being paid his legal fee, was to record this certificate. Six months were allowed for redemption and after that period the sheriff was to execute a deed of conveyance in fee simple and the sale became absolute.²⁵ This system remained in effect until 1857, when some modifications were made in details of the law. In this year the tax collector was first mentioned in the general revenue bill. This year also for the first time there was a requirement of the publication of a delinquent tax list. The procedure for sale was the same, but after the sale the tax collector was required to issue to the purchaser a certificate in duplicate. The tax collector was also required to keep a book for the purpose of entering a record of lands sold for taxes. The recorder was required to keep a book similar to that of the tax collector. If the property was redeemed within six months the fact was to be noted on the certificate and on the margin of the book. If no redemption was made within six months, the tax collector was to make, upon demand, a deed which should give a valid title to the property.²⁶

In 1861 a radical departure was made from the former method of enforcing the collection of taxes on real estate. By the revenue law of that year and by a supplemental act, it was provided that after the publication of the delinquent tax list, this list was, after a specified period and after due notice of the fact, turned over to the district attorney, who was required to bring civil suits in the courts for the amount of the taxes, penalties and costs. In accordance with the working of this law the records of the district court contain many titles relating to tax suits. Judgments secured in these suits became a lien on all property of the defendants liable to taxation.²⁷ This plan, with minor modifications in detail, continued in force until the adoption of the Political Code in 1872.

The Political Code of 1872 did away with the tax suits which have just been mentioned. It provided that after the publication of the delinquent tax list and notice of sale, which notice was required to be filed in the office of the clerk and recorder, the sale should be held by the tax collector. After the sale the latter was to make out in duplicate a certificate of sale, one copy of which was to be delivered to the purchaser and the other filed in the office of the recorder, who was also required to make an entry in a book provided for the purpose. The property might be redeemed within twelve months. If so redeemed the recorder was required to note the fact on the certificate and in the record book. If the property was not redeemed within twelve months the tax collector was then to make to the purchaser a deed of the property, reciting the facts in the case, and this deed conveyed an absolute title, saving only the prior rights of the United States or the State of California.²⁸ This system, with several amendments in detail, continued in force until 1895.

In 1895 amendments to the code were adopted under which the sale of land to private parties for non-payment of taxes was discontinued, and it was provided that at the time of the delinquent tax sale the whole amount of property assessed and then remaining on the delinquent list, should be struck off to the state as the purchaser, and the proper notations made on the assessment list, provided that on the day of sale the owner or person in possession may pay the taxes, penalties and costs due; and provided further, that when the original tax amounts to $300 or more on any piece of property the state may bring suit for collection. Property thus sold to the state might be redeemed within five years or at any time prior to entry or sale of said lands under the land laws of the state, and during this five years it continued to be assessed as before the sale in the name of its owner until a deed was made to the state. If the property was not redeemed within five years the tax collector was required to make a deed to the property to the state. This deed was to be recorded in the usual manner and then forwarded to the state controller, except in the case of state lands upon which the full purchase price of $1.25 had not been paid. In the latter case the deed was forwarded to the surveyor-general and the land was then open to entry and sale in the same manner as other state lands, except that the former owner was the preferred purchaser for six months.²⁹ Such lands for which deeds to state had been filed with the state controller³⁰ were then subject to sale at public auction upon application to the county tax collector and the authorization of the state controller, no bid to be accepted for a less amount than the aggregate amount of all taxes, penalties and costs then against the property, including costs of sale. Until so disposed of by the state it might still be redeemed by the former owner upon making the proper payments. If redeemed in this way after the deed has been made to the state the receipts of the treasurer, controller and auditor in connection with the transaction might be recorded in the recorder's office in the book of deeds, and then had the effect of a deed of reconveyance.³¹ An amendment adopted in 1913 provided that on the day of the delinquent tax sale any property which had been sold to the state five years before and not since redeemed should be sold by the tax collector at public auction. No bid shall be accepted for a sum less than the amount of taxes, penalties and costs for the year for which the property was sold to the state for delinquent taxes. The purchaser then has thirty days in which to redeem all subsequent taxes, penalties and costs remaining a charge on delinquent taxes. If no sale is made, or the successful bidder does not make the redemption as described within thirty days, then the property is deeded to the state as previously provided.³²

Liens for Public Improvements. The methods employed to compel payment of assessments made for public improvements are very similar to those used to collect the regular property taxes. Liens are filed against the property until the amounts assessed are paid. These are usually for street improvements, or through irrigation, lighting or sanitary districts.

Squirrel Claims. An uncommon record of the type just described is that relating to the destruction of ground squirrels. The records of the county officials frequently bring to light illustrations of how local conditions have affected legislation. An interesting instance of this kind is found in the records regarding squirrel claims or squirrel nuisances. Laws on this subject began to appear on the statute books early in the history of the state. They were all special enactments affecting certain specified counties, but sooner or later practically the whole of the agricultural portion of the state was covered by them. They were all designed to encourage the destruction of squirrels, gophers and other similar pests. A typical law is that of March 10, 1874, applying to Contra Costa and Alameda counties. Squirrels are declared to be a nuisance and it is made the duty of all persons owning land to keep it clear of squirrels. Squirrel districts are created and inspectors authorized, whose duty it is to destroy the squirrels wherever the land owners fail to do so. The cost of such destruction, with certain added penalties, are made a lien upon the property, and provision is made for suits to enforce the lien. The recorder is required to keep a special record under the provisions of the law.³³ Many similar laws were passed, but all were repealed about 1880, or superceded by the uniform county government act, which authorized the board of supervisors to destroy pests.³⁴ Special volumes for recording these claims are found in Alameda, Contra Costa, Santa Barbara, Santa Clara and Stanislaus counties.

Attachments, Liens, Lis Pendens. Since 1851 the recorder has been required to keep separate volumes in which to record all notices of attachment upon real estate, mechanics' liens or notices of actions, usually called lis pendens.³⁵ The latter is a notice of pendency of actions which, if affecting the title to real property, must be filed with the recorder of the county within which the property is located. It must contain the names of the parties, the object of the action and a description of the property affected. In nearly all of the counties the law requiring distinct record books has been followed; in a few they have been combined with other records, being, however, kept distinct by means of a separate index.

Certificates of Sale under Execution. By a law enacted in 1866, the recorder was required to keep a volume entitled "Certificates of Sale" within which he was to record all certificates of sale of real estate sold under executions or under any order made by any judicial proceeding. In connection with this, he was required to keep an index showing for each entry the name of the plaintiff, the defendant, the purchaser and the date of sale.³⁶ At the time of the adoption of the Political Code in 1872 this provision was incorporated in that part setting forth the duties of the recorder, and since then has appeared in the various county government acts and is included in the present Political Code.³⁷

So far as the existing records are concerned, certificates of sale under execution are closely related to certificates of sale for taxes. In some counties the two are kept in a common series, in a few cases the common series covering only a portion of the record and distinct series being used for the balance. Where a distinct series of volumes is used, the titles upon the volumes are found to vary, only a few using the actual title, "Certificates of Sale Under Execution." Among the more common variations may be noticed "Certificates of Sheriff's Sales" and similar designations. In a number of counties the record was begun earlier than 1866. Certificates of sale under execution, as also those for taxes, are in their effect similar to deeds and it is therefore not surprising that in some cases these instruments have been recorded in the deed books. In other cases they have found their way into that catch-all, Miscellaneous Records.

Transcripts of Judgments. Among the records required to be kept by the recorder since the act of 1850 is the Transcript of Judgments, where the judgment conveyed or affected the title of real estate. It was also specified in the civil practice act of 1851 and continued in the Code of Civil Procedure that a transcript of the original judgment docket certified to by the clerk might be filed with the recorder of any other county. From the time of filing, the judgment becomes a lien upon the property of the judgment debtor within the county, the same as the docketing of the judgment by the clerk had affected the property of the judgment debtor in the first county.³⁸

MISCELLANEOUS PROPERTY RECORDS

Maps. No specific law required the recording of maps before the act of March 9, 1893. As early as 1850, however, it was set forth as one of the duties of the recorder that he was to have the custody of, safely keep and preserve all maps, as well as other records deposited in his office. Since the title to a piece of property depends very largely upon the description of its location and since this in turn is often given in terms of a map or surveyor's notes, the importance of the map or record of survey in its relation to the record of the title to the property is apparent. It is but natural, therefore, that many maps were filed for record before the law specifically demanded that they be so filed.

By the act of March 9, 1893, it was provided that whenever any city, town or subdivision of land into lots, or any addition shall be laid out in lots for sale the proprietors shall have made an accurate map or plat thereof, this map to be certified and filed in the office of the recorder in the county in which the city, town, etc., is situated.³⁹ An amending act of March 14, 1901, provided that the recorder shall paste all such maps securely in a book of maps, when it shall be deemed to have been recorded.⁴⁰ By an act passed in 1907 it was made the duty of the recorder to examine all maps presented for recording, to see whether they conform to his records and the law, and to refuse to accept all maps which do not so conform.⁴¹

An act of March 16, 1907, to define the duties of and to license land surveyors, provides that within sixty days after the making of a survey by a licensed surveyor he must file with the recorder a record of the survey, made in "good draughtsman-like manner." This the recorder is required to paste in a stub book provided for that purpose; he is also required to keep an index to such records of surveys.⁴²

From this it will be seen that there are at least two sets of maps which are to be found in the office of the recorder: one, frequently entitled a record of maps; the other, a record of surveys by licensed surveyors. While this distinction has been followed in a large number of the counties there is no uniformity in regard to the map records. In addition to these maps there are usually miscellaneous maps of towns, county maps, road surveys, and the like, some of which are of considerable historical value.

Licensed Surveyors. By an act of March 31, 1891, to define the duties of and to license land surveyors, the state surveyor-general was required to transmit monthly to the recorder of each county a full and correct list of all persons licensed as land surveyors, and it was made the duty of the recorder to keep these lists in his office in such a way that they may easily be accessible. An act of March 16, 1907, continued in force the provisions of the previous act regarding the filing of licenses.⁴³ These lists are kept on file, usually in filing boxes, though in a few cases they are pasted into a book. In a few counties an index register is kept. As the lists are all the same and simply duplicates of the surveyor-general's lists, the record in any particular county is of importance only for local reference.

Marks and Brands. The influence of the great number of men engaged in the stock and cattle business and of the wide-extending unenclosed ranches is to be seen very clearly in the early legislation of the state, and in some of the public records. This is especially to be noticed in the laws regarding the identification of animals, and providing for the recovery of those lost or strayed.

By an act of the first legislature it was provided that the owner of horses, mules, cattle, sheep, goats or hogs was to have a mark, brand, and counter-brand different from that of his neighbors; the mark to be different from any other in the county and the brand in so far as possible to be different from any other within the state. The owner was to deliver to the recorder of the county a full description of the ear-mark, and present to him for examination his branding iron, a full description of which was to be recorded in the office of the recorder. The act was modified slightly during the session of 1851, requiring that the mark be cut upon a piece of leather and the brand and counter-brand be burned upon it. This was then to be kept in the office of the recorder and to be considered as evidence in any court of law.⁴⁴ No mark or brand was to be considered lawful unless recorded.

In order that there might not be confusion regarding the brands of adjacent counties it was further provided that after recording a mark and brand the recorder was to transmit to the recorders of the adjoining counties a transcript of each mark and brand recorded.⁴⁵

As a usual rule it is safe to say that these provisions have been very well adhered to. Frequently the early entries are found to have been recorded in Spanish, and in some cases the brand books contain interesting specimens of the artistic work of the recorder or his deputies.

Estrays. Before 1897 there was no general law relating to stray domestic animals. There were many special acts, whose provisions it is not possible here to relate in detail, although there were some features which were fairly uniform. Beginning with the act of May 1, 1851, which applied to about two-thirds of the counties, the recorder was required to have an Estray Book, in which to keep a record regarding estrays found in the county. Provision was made for the recovery of these animals by their owners where the latter were known or where the brands and marks on the animal were on record in the book of marks and brands.⁴⁶ In 1897 and in 1901 general laws were passed which require that persons taking up stray domestic animals shall file a notice with description, etc., in the office of the recorder. Provision is made for the recovery of the animal or animals by their owners and for their sale in case the owner is unknown. This law, with some amendments in detail, is now in force.⁴⁷

The Civil Code provides that the finder of a thing other than a domestic animal must, in case the owner is known, inform him of the fact. If the owner is not known the finder must, within five days, file an affidavit with the justice of the peace, who will summon three disinterested persons to make an appraisement of the thing found. Two copies of their report of appraisal and valuation shall be made, one to go to the justice of the peace, the other to the finder, who must within five days have it recorded by the recorder in a book known as the Estray and Lost Property Book. Other sections of the law provide for the recovery or sale of the thing found.⁴⁸

Though most of the counties have one or more volumes devoted to estrays, these records do not bulk very large in the aggregate. Only eight counties have more than one volume for this purpose, and in only one (Yolo) are there to be found both an Estray Book and an Estray and Lost Property Book.

VITAL STATISTICS

The records of vital statistics, notwithstanding their great importance, were during the earlier years very poorly kept. As early as 1851 the statutes required that the recorder keep a record of marriage certificates and contracts, but it was not until the act of April 26, 1858, that any attempt was made to keep a record of any other vital statistics.¹ This act provided for the registration of marriages, births, divorces and deaths. For this purpose the office of state registrar was created, it being provided that:

“He shall prepare and furnish to the county recorders of each county suitable blanks and books, prepared according to the following forms: For Marriages—Entries of the date, locality, name, surname, residence, and age, of the respective parties, the place of nativity of the same, when the record was made, together with the name, place of residence, and official station of the person performing the marriage ceremony. For Births—Entries of the date and locality of the same, the name, sex, and color of the child, the names, nativity, color, and residence of the parents, and the date of the record. For Divorces—Entries of the date of the divorce, Christian and surnames, and residence of the parties obtaining the same, title of the court granting the divorce, and the name of the party making the application, the grounds upon which the divorce was granted, and the date when the record was made. For Deaths—Entries of the date, and name, sex, age, color, single or married, occupation, nativity, disease, or cause of death, place of interment, and date when the record was made.”

The recorder was required to enter every record of marriage, birth, divorce or death, according to instructions received from the state registrar. A duplicate of the record was required to be sent to the state registrar. In order that the records might be turned in to the recorders it was made the duty of every person performing a marriage ceremony to report it to the recorder. In similar manner physicians, parents, and keepers of institutions were required to report births; persons obtaining a divorce were to report the fact; and the sexton or other person having charge of burials was to furnish the information for the death records. It was further provided that persons entering the record of each of these matters should pay to the recorder a fee of fifty cents; while failure to report the fact laid the guilty person liable to a fine of not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. Unfortunately, notwithstanding the explicit provisions of the act and the penalties imposed upon persons neglecting to report, the law seems not to have been taken as seriously as its importance demanded. In most cases the records show the statistics for the years 1858, 1859 and probably 1860, but after that date few entries appear.

⁴⁸Civ. Code, § 1865; Stats. 1905: 613.

¹Stats. 1851: 200; 1858: 342-344.

At the time of the adoption of the Political Code in 1872 the secretary of the state board of health recommended a simpler law on the subject of vital statistics. All persons performing marriage ceremonies, assisting at births, or in attendance upon deceased persons, funerals or inquests, were required to keep a register showing certain specified facts regarding the case. The marriage certificates were to be recorded within thirty days after the marriage, and in the case of births or deaths the entries were to be reported to the recorder at the end of each quarter. In the case of births and deaths a fee of twenty-five cents a name was imposed, the money to be paid primarily by the parents or the person next of kin. If no fee was paid the fact was to be reported anyway and the money paid by the supervisors of the county. Neglect to report these statistics made the party subject to a fine of fifty dollars. The recorder was to record the facts regarding births and deaths in separate registers known as "Register of Births" and "Register of Deaths." As the result of this legislation many of the local officials once again were aroused to action; in some cases this resulted in continuous records, but in the majority of counties they were again neglected after a few years.²

Amendments to the Political Code passed in 1905 called for more strict attention to the matter of vital statistics and as the result the records from that date seem to be practically complete. By this act, approved March 18, 1905, all persons performing marriage ceremonies were required to file with the recorder within three days after the marriage a certificate of registry of the marriage in which was to be stated, among other things, the date of the marriage; the sex, age, race, color, birthplace and residence of each of the parties; the number of the marriage; the occupation of the parties; the maiden name of the woman if previously married; the names and birthplace of the parents of each and the maiden name of the mother of each. This data should be incorporated by the recorder in his Register of Marriages, the original certificate being then sent to the state registrar.

In a similar manner physicians or others in attendance at the birth of a child were required within five days to return to the recorder, or if in incorporated cities to the health officer as registrar, a certificate of birth showing the time and place of birth; the name, sex, race and color of the child; the occupation and residence of the parents, with the maiden name of the mother; and whether or not the child was born in wedlock. This was to be entered in the Register of Births, after which the original certificate was to be sent to the state registrar.³

By the amendments to the codes passed in 1907, it was provided that the recorder should make a complete and accurate copy of each certificate registered by him upon a form identical with the original certificate, to be filed and permanently preserved in his office as the local record of such marriage or birth.⁴

More definite rules for the registration of deaths were adopted in a statute approved March 18, 1905.⁵ This act gave to the State Bureau of Vital Statistics the general supervision of the records of death. In this they were to be assisted by local registrars, the city clerk or recorder in incorporated cities and towns, and the county recorder in the district lying outside of incorporated municipalities. No burial permit was to be issued until after the return of a satisfactory certificate of death. This certificate must be of standard form recommended by the United States census office and the American Public Health Association and must contain information as to the exact time and place of death; the name, sex, race and color of the deceased; whether married, single or widowed; date and place of birth; name and birthplace of the father; maiden name and birthplace of the mother; and the occupation of the deceased. Other items regarding the cause of death, place of burial, etc., are to be supplied by the physician and undertaker. The local registrar is required to make a complete and accurate copy of each certificate upon a form identical with the original certificate, this copy to be filed in his office as the local record of such death. The original certificate is then sent on to the state office. In 1907 further amendments were made in regard to the registration of deaths, but none of these affected the method or form of the records as above described.⁶

Although during the earlier years the records regarding marriages, births and deaths were very poorly kept, the survey of the county archives shows that since 1905 these various records have been kept in excellent shape in nearly all of the counties of the state and for the student of sociological questions should furnish invaluable information.

Burial Permits. In 1889 a provision was inserted in the Political Code, requiring that burial permits be filed with the recorder.⁷ This was repealed in 1905,⁸ but in 1913 a section relating to burial permits was again added to the code, and among its provisions is one requiring superintendents of cemeteries, boards of health and health officers to report weekly to the recorder the names of all persons interred during the preceding week.⁹ In one county (Stanislaus) the recorder, taking cognizance of the new provision in 1889, added to the archives of his office a volume for recording burial permits, and this record has been kept up to date. In no other county has a separate record been kept of these permits.

MISCELLANEOUS RECORDS

In addition to those already described there are a number of sets of records in the office of the recorder that are not readily capable of classification. They have therefore been reserved for consideration under the general title of miscellaneous records. As used in this sense, the descriptive title must not be confused with the particular set of records usually known as Miscellaneous Records, although both titles arise from similar conditions. The Miscellaneous Records, sometimes called Miscellany or Promiscuous Records, contain those documents which by their peculiar nature do not naturally belong elsewhere. They therefore, especially in the volumes for the earlier years, contain a great deal of interesting and valuable information from the historical point of view.

Agreements. Although not specified as one of the records required to be kept in a separate book, about one-half of the counties have a book for the recording of agreements. In the majority of these counties the title of these records is Agreements, but many use Covenants or Contracts or a combination of titles. In those counties which do not have a separate record of this title, instruments of this character are recorded in a volume known as Miscellaneous Records. The index to the record will show at least the names of the contracting parties and the volume and page where the document may be found. It may also give the date and general nature of the document.

Architects. By an act "to regulate the practice of architecture," approved March 23, 1901, it is provided that an architect, before entering upon the practice of his profession in this state, must receive a license from the State Board of Architecture. It is further provided that the license must be recorded in the office of the recorder in each county in which the holder shall practice. A failure to have the license recorded is sufficient cause for revocation of the license.¹ The license may be revoked for cause, and when so revoked by the State Board of Architecture, notice of such revocation is to be sent to the recorder of each county in the state, who shall thereupon mark the certificate "canceled."² The provisions of this act, with minor amendments, are now in force.³ In several of the counties this record is kept in a bound volume; in others, the certificates are merely filed, either with or without an index.

Banking Records. Banking Assets; Banking Capital. By an act approved April 1, 1876, all corporations or persons doing a banking business were required to publish in January and July of each year and also file with the recorder a sworn statement of the amount of capital actually paid into such business. In like manner all banking houses were required to publish and have recorded a sworn statement showing the actual condition of the assets and liabilities. The recorder was to keep two sets of well-bound books for the recording of these statements, to be labeled respectively, "Statements of Banking Assets" and "Statements of Banking Capital." This act was repealed by an act dated March 26, 1895.⁴ Since these volumes are no longer required to be kept as current records they have been, in many counties, relegated to storerooms.

Election Expenses. By the provisions of the act to promote the purity of elections, approved February 23, 1893, candidates and campaign committees were required to file itemized statements of their receipts and expenditures, with proper affidavits. In the case of candidates for offices filled by the electors of the state or of political divisions greater than the county, members of the senate and assembly, representatives in Congress and members of state commissions, these statements were to be filed with the secretary of state. In all other cases they were to be filed in the office of the clerk and were also to be recorded in the office of the recorder and to become a public record. These provisions were retained in the act of March 19, 1907, and are still in force.⁵

As a result of this law there are in most of the counties volumes devoted to the recording of candidates' and committees' statements of election expenses. A large number of such statements are also to be found recorded in Miscellaneous Records.

Fee Books. The first general law regarding fee books was that of April 1, 1864, but before that date there had been passed laws requiring the keeping of fee books in certain counties.⁶ The law of 1864 required that every officer authorized by law to receive fees for official services should keep a fee book, in which to enter all fees or other compensation received or to be received by him or his deputies giving the date, name of person paying or to pay, and the nature of the service rendered. During January and July of each year this book was to be filed with the clerk of the supervisors with the sworn statement of the officer that it was correct.⁷

The uniform county government act of March 14, 1883, contained a provision that each officer authorized to receive fees under that act must keep a fee book, open to the public, in which must be entered, at once and in detail, all fees or compensation received by him. On the first Monday of each month he must add up each column to the first day of the month and set down the totals. On the expiration of his term of office he must deliver all fee books kept by him to the auditor.⁸ The uniform county government acts of March 31, 1891, and March 24, 1893, incorporated the provisions of both these laws, but the county government act of April 1, 1897, included only the provisions of the law of 1883, and this requirement has been incorporated in the Political Code as it now stands.⁹

The fee book is not a record in the ordinary sense, its function being to check the financial operations of the office. It is therefore only temporarily useful and is consequently one of the first to be relegated to the storeroom. These books not infrequently find a more or less permanent abiding place in the auditor's office, and in a few counties, where offices are combined, the fee book of the combined office may be found in the room devoted to the business of the clerk or auditor. An examination will show gaps in the series of fee books in a number of counties, indicating that many of the volumes have been lost or otherwise disposed of.

Newspaper Files. It will be seen by examination of this report, that there are in the various courthouses of the state a large number of volumes of newspaper files. These have in large part come into the county archives by virtue of several laws passed by the legislature during the earlier years of the state's history. The most important was the act of April 8, 1862, by which it was made the duty of the recorder of each county to subscribe for from one to three newspapers published within the county, the particular paper or papers to be designated by the board of supervisors. These papers were to be received and preserved by the recorder, who was to have them bound in volumes and kept in his office "for the use of the Courts, when needed, of strangers, and the inhabitants of the county," all of whom were to have access to them during office hours free of charge.¹⁰ No special act has been found whereby this law was repealed, but in the Index to the Laws of California (1907), prepared under the supervision of the Commission for the Revision and Reform of the Law, it is classed as one of the acts repealed by the codes.¹¹

Three other laws, whose purpose seems to have been mainly political, have required the deposit of newspapers in the county clerk's office: (1) A law "to provide for the better publication of official and legal notices," approved May 3, 1853, designated by name seventeen newspapers throughout the state in one or other of which all legal notices must be published, each one of the papers serving for one county or a group of counties. These newspapers were required to furnish two copies of each issue to the secretary of state and to the clerk of each county and these officials were "required to keep and preserve the same, open to public inspection."¹² The law was repealed the next year.¹³ It is very doubtful whether its provisions were strictly adhered to while it was in force, but certain files which were until recently in the office of the clerk of Santa Clara County were probably deposited there as a result of this law, and it is possible that other instances might be found. (2) An "Act to protect litigants," enacted in 1870, made it the duty of each district judge to designate one newspaper in each county within his jurisdiction, in which must be published all legal and judicial advertising for that county. Copies of these newspapers had to be furnished to the clerk of the county in which it was published, and he was required to have one file bound.¹⁴ This law was repealed at the next session of the legislature.¹⁵ (3) In 1870 another law was passed which authorized the governor, secretary of state and attorney-general, or any two of them, to select a newspaper published at Sacramento to be the official state paper, in which all state official advertising and all legal notices to non-residents must be published. The publisher was required to "furnish two copies of the said newspaper, free of charge, to each and every County Clerk in the State, to be regularly filed by him and kept in his office for reference."¹⁶ This law also was repealed at the next session of the legislature,¹⁷ but its presence on the statute books for two years is the explanation of the files of the Sacramento Reporter to be found in several courthouses of the state.

From the historical point of view the effect of these early laws has been most fortunate, for in some cases the files to be found in county offices are the only ones now in existence. Many of these files are still carefully retained in the main offices, but in some other instances, though still kept as a part of the archives, they are very poorly cared for, being crowded into storerooms or basements. In some cases it is known that files once in the courthouse have been removed by private parties. There is no uniformity regarding the particular office within which these papers are now located, for though the bulk of them are in the recorder's office, a considerable number are with the clerk and in a few cases some have been found with the auditor.

Newspapers continued to be deposited in various county offices throughout the state long after all these early laws had gone out of operation, and in some counties files of local newspapers are still being received. In part these are no doubt files of the county "official paper," as the paper is commonly called in which the delinquent tax list is published; and part of them are sent in because of the publisher's desire to have a file of his paper preserved in a safer place than his own office.

By an act approved March 19, 1909, the county board of supervisors may authorize the recorder to deposit with any free public library maintained at the county seat such newspaper files or portions thereof as may be in his custody. Before making the deposit, however, the board must obtain from the trustees of the library an agreement that they will properly preserve these files and make them accessible to the public.¹⁸

Official Bonds. The act of February 28, 1850, concerning official bonds of officers, provided that the official bond of the district attorney should be approved by the judge of the district court and filed and recorded in the office of the clerk in some county of the district designated by the judge. The official bonds of the sheriff, coroner, justice of the peace and all other county officers were to be approved by the county judge and filed and recorded in the office of the recorder. The act establishing the recorder's office, approved April 4, 1850, required that official to record in a separate book all commissions and official bonds required by law to be recorded in his office.¹⁹ The Political Code in 1872 provided that unless otherwise prescribed by statute, the official bonds of county and township officers must be approved by the county judge, recorded in the office of the recorder and filed in the office of the clerk. The official bonds must be recorded in a book kept for that purpose entitled "Record of Official Bonds." An amendment in 1873 provided that the clerk's bond, after recording, should be filed in the office of the treasurer. A further amendment in 1880 substituted the superior judge for the county judge as the official by whom the bonds should be approved. These provisions, thus amended, are embodied in the present Political Code.²⁰

Slavery Papers and Indian Indentures. Although slavery was forbidden by the state constitution many documents to be found in the county archives give abundant proof that this institution did exist for many years after California became a state. These are usually single documents in the form of emancipation or manumission papers which are recorded in deed books or in the volumes devoted to miscellaneous records. Examples of this may be found in the archives of El Dorado, Los Angeles, Mariposa, Placer, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, and elsewhere.

In the archives of Humboldt County was found an interesting bundle of documents entitled "Indian Indentures." It is probable the miscellaneous records of other counties having a large Indian population may also contain similar documents. An act passed April 22, 1850, provided that any person having obtained a minor Indian through the consent of the parents or relatives of the child might go before a justice of the peace and after having shown that no compulsion had been employed to secure the child, require the justice to issue a certificate authorizing the applicant to have the "care, custody, control and earnings" of the child until he was eighteen years of age if a male, fifteen if a female. On the other hand, the applicant agreed to feed and clothe the child and to treat him in a humane manner.²¹

In 1860 the act was amended, action now being taken before a district or county judge who was to issue duplicate copies of the articles of indenture, one copy to be filed in the office of the recorder. This act extended the provisions of the former law to include not only children but adults as well if they were held as prisoners of war, or vagrant Indians who had "no settled habitation or means of livelihood, and have not placed themselves under the protection of any white person." In 1863 the acts permitting this practice were repealed.²²

Sole Traders. On April 12, 1852, an act was approved authorizing married women to transact business in their own names as sole traders. Under this act the woman was to make a declaration before a notary stating that it was her intention to carry on business in her own name, setting forth the nature of the business and from what date she would be individually responsible for all debts incurred. This declaration was then to be advertised in some public newspaper of the county and

An amendment to this act was adopted April 8, 1862, by which it was required that the applicant present the petition at a session of the district court and the creditors of the husband were then to be permitted to interpose objections to the proposed action. The order of the court, entitling the applicant to the privileges of the act, together with the oath of the petitioner, were then to be recorded in a book kept by the recorder for that purpose. The court action was subsequently transferred to the superior court but otherwise the provisions of this act are now incorporated in the Code of Civil Procedure.²⁴

Special Partnerships. The formation of special partnerships was authorized by an act approved March 4, 1870. This act permitted a special partnership for the transaction of any business except banking or insurance. Such a partnership was to consist of one or more persons called general partners and one or more persons called special partners. A special partner enjoyed certain specified rights and exemptions, the most important being that he was not liable for the debts of the partnership beyond the amount of capital contributed to the firm.

Each member in the special partnership was required to sign a certificate setting forth the name under which the partnership was to be conducted; the general nature of the business to be transacted; the names of all the partners, with their residences, indicating which were general and which special partners; the amount of capital contributed by each special partner to the common stock; and the period for which the partnership was formed. This certificate was then to be acknowledged by each of the partners and recorded in a book to be kept for that purpose by the recorder of the county in which the principal business of the partnership was to be transacted. It was also to be published in a newspaper of the county, or as near thereto as possible, once a week for four successive weeks. If the business of the partnership was to be conducted in more than one county, certificates should be filed for record in each county.²⁵

With the adoption of the Civil Code in 1872 the act of 1870 was incorporated almost as it stood into that code. One new feature, however, is to be noted, for in the code it was now provided that the certificate of special partnership should not only be recorded by the recorder but that it should also be filed with the clerk. In their general form the provisions of the act as first adopted are still to be found in the Civil Code of the state.²⁶

Stallion Register. By an act of May 1, 1911, a stallion registration board was created with authority to issue licenses, and it was provided that all licenses issued for stallions and jacks must be recorded by the recorder in the county in which the stallion or jack is used. An amendment adopted in 1915 did away with the requirement for the recording of licenses by the recorder.²⁷

THE SCHOOL AND FISCAL OFFICIALS

SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS

The office of county superintendent of schools was first mentioned in an act approved May 3, 1852, entitled "An act to establish a system of common schools." This act, although it defined the duties of the superintendent, failed to state how he was to be elected or appointed.¹ An amendatory act² passed the next year provided that

"The County Assessor of each and every county in the State shall be, and he is hereby, constituted the Superintendent of Common Schools within and for his county."

Although it may appear strange that the assessor should have been entrusted with the headship of the county school department, it must be remembered that in this early period the duties of superintendent of schools were few compared with his activities at present and did not require the full time of an official; furthermore, a very large share of his duties related to the administration of the school lands which included the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections in each township. Under these circumstances the assessor, whose regular duties took him over the whole county, was the natural one in whose hands to place this work.

The office of superintendent of schools was made a separate and distinct office in 1855. The act provided that a superintendent of common schools should be elected in the county at each general election. The term of office at that time was fixed at two years.³ According to the act it was to be his duty:

"First, To visit each school in the county under his control, personally, at least once a year, and to exercise a general supervision over the interests of Common Schools in his county, and give to the School Trustees, Marshals and Teachers such aid and counsel as may be important to the prosperity of the schools.

Second, To aid the various School Trustees in the examination of teachers for public schools, and to see that the examination in all cases is sufficiently rigid and thorough.

Third, To distribute promptly such blank reports, forms, laws and instructions, as shall be deposited in his office for the use of the School Trustees, Teachers and Marshals, and any other officers entitled to receive the same.

Fourth, To draw his warrants on the County Treasurer in favor of, and deliver the same to, the persons entitled to receive the same; . . .

¹Stats. 1852: 117-118.

²Stats. 1853: 231.

³Stats. 1855: 231.

Fifth, To keep on file in his office the report of the School Trustees, Marshals and Teachers, received by him, and to record all his official acts as such County Superintendent, in a book to be provided for that purpose; and at the close of his official term, to deliver to his successor such records and all documents, books and papers belonging to his office, and to take his receipts for the same, which shall be filed in the office of the County Treasurer.

Sixth, To make full report, in writing, annually, on or before the twentieth day [of] November, for the school year ending on the last day of October next previous thereto, to the Superintendent of Public Instruction; such report to include an abstract of all the various annual reports of the City Boards of Education, School Teachers, Marshals and Teachers, by laws required to be made to the County Superintendent for the preceding school year."

In addition to this he was to apportion the school funds among the various districts in proportion to the number of white children residing therein.

This list of duties varied from time to time. The Political Code as it now stands defines the general duties of the school superintendent to be as follows:

1. To superintend the schools of the county.
2. To apportion the school moneys to each school district each quarter.
3. To draw requisitions on county funds for expenses of school districts.
4. To keep open for public inspection a register of requisitions showing the use of each school fund.
5. To visit each school in the county at least once annually.
6. To preside over teachers' institutes in the county.
7. To issue temporary certificates to persons qualified to receive them.
8. To distribute all laws, reports, circulars, etc., to school officers.
9. To keep on file the reports of the superintendent of public instruction.
10. To keep a record of his official acts and of the proceedings of the county board of education.
11. To pass upon and approve of all plans for building school-houses, etc., in towns not having city boards of education.
12. To appoint trustees to fill vacancies.
13. To make such reports upon the condition of schools as may be demanded by the superintendent of public instruction.
14. To preserve carefully all reports of school officers and teachers.
15. To grade each school in the county once each year.
16. To recommend and advise the local boards of education in reference to receiving federal aid in teaching Indian children.⁴

Annual Report. One of the important records of the office is the annual report to the superintendent of public instruction. This is used by the state superintendent in the compilation of his annual report. While a large part of the information may therefore be found in printed form in these reports, there is nevertheless much additional valuable information of a local nature to be had from these county superintendents' reports. The reports are compiled in printed form books prepared under the direction of the state superintendent and vary in the nature of their contents according to the ideas of that official. In general they give detailed information regarding the school districts, length of term, number of pupils, attendance, school property, etc.

In six counties—Contra Costa, Fresno, Marin, San Diego, Sonoma and Yolo—these reports begin as early as 1865; in Mendocino, Sacramento and Santa Clara they date from 1866. In nearly all the offices, with the exception of the early years which are frequently lacking, these reports are complete. Usually several years are bound together in board covers, although in some counties they are filed in their original paper covers.

Records of the Board of Education. Since 1880 the superintendent of the schools of the county has been by virtue of his office the secretary of the county board of education.⁵ He, therefore, has charge of the records of that board. The most important of these are the minutes of board meetings and the records of examinations of candidates for teachers' certificates or diplomas of graduation from the schools of the county. The minutes of the board are usually known under that title, but they are also referred to as Records or Proceedings. In several counties the first dates of these records precede the year 1880; most of them, however, begin at that date. From the date of beginning they are in nearly all cases complete.

Certification Records. The granting of teachers' certificates is one of the most important functions of the county board of education. These are issued either after examination or upon the presentation of the required credentials from properly qualified educational institutions. The record of this action may be found either in a Record of Certificates, in which entries giving the name, grade of certificate, date issued, and period covered are shown, or in the certificate form-books. The latter are stub-books containing the printed certificates. These form-books vary according to the grade of certificates issued. Since these certificates are usually left on file in the superintendent's office many are to be found unremoved from the stub. In case of removal from the county the certificate is taken out and given to the teacher. These documents may be of much value in ascertaining the record of a teacher's activity or other information regarding the individuals concerned.

School Census Records. Until 1911 the apportionment of school funds was made according to the relative number of children of school age in each school district.⁶ To determine this number it was necessary to take a census once a year of all children residing within the district who were of school age. The records are the field notes of the census marshal, and the census report. The former give the name, age, and other information regarding each child in the district and is arranged in the order in which the information was acquired, it is therefore usually by families; the latter is an abstract based upon the field notes including the names of parents and children. The great value of these records is readily apparent to anyone who has need of information regarding population or in reference to the personal or family history in the community. Unfortunately, the records have usually been considered of only temporary value. In no case were they found to be complete. Since 1911 the apportionment of school funds has been made dependent upon actual school attendance rather than school population, with the result that the school census has been discontinued.

Reports of Teachers, Trustees. Since 1852 the superintendent has been required to keep the reports of teachers and trustees and to compile from them the information for his annual report to the state superintendent. Unfortunately, as a rule these school district reports have not been kept. In some cases, however, they are still to be found for early dates and furnish very valuable information regarding the beginning and development of the school system in the places concerned.

Examination Records. Since one of the chief duties of the county board of education is to examine into the qualifications of teachers and candidates for graduation the records relating to this subject are usually kept in separate books. The examination records contain the names of those examined with the grade attained in each subject in which they were examined. This applies both to the examination of teacher and pupils. In some cases files of examination questions are preserved and in others the papers are still to be found.

Journal or Record of Official Acts. Since 1852 the superintendent has been required to keep a record of his official acts. This is presumably a record book in which is to be inscribed a report of all the activities of the superintendent in the discharge of his official duties. This book is to be found in about one-third of the counties. Its value and importance vary according to the nature of the person holding the office of superintendent. In most cases it follows the form of a diary or journal and hence is called a journal. Although many of these books are merely perfunctory statements of official business some of them are of great interest owing to the fact that they are written in a form which gives an insight into the activities of the superintendent.

Financial Records. Records relating to financial matters are to be recognized by their titles as Register of Requisitions, Register of Warrants, School District Ledger, Superintendent's Fee Book and Teachers' Retirement Fund Record. At the time of the adoption of the code in 1872 the superintendent was required to keep a Register of Warrants showing the fund upon which the warrant was drawn, its number, to whom issued and for what service, together with a receipt from the person receiving it.⁷ In 1880 this was replaced by the Register of Requisitions which is essentially the same record.⁸ In some counties both records are kept. The nature of the School District Ledger is evident from its title, for it gives under one heading the financial condition of each separate district or fund. The value of these records is not confined merely to financial matters, as may be seen from the use made of them of recent years to establish the facts in reference to the term of service of public school teachers, such a record being most necessary in connection with claims for the teacher's retirement fund. By an act passed in 1913 teachers are granted a pension upon retirement after a specified term of service. The fund for this purpose is raised by levying upon the monthly salary of the public school teachers. A record of this fund is kept by the superintendent.

THE FISCAL OFFICIALS

The fiscal officials—auditor, treasurer, assessor and tax collector—have under their control a great mass of records relating to the financial end of the county government. Not only will the person studying problems of finance find these records useful, but furthermore the seeker for general historical information is often forced to refer to records of this character in order to verify a fact, or transaction, even though it be only incidentally related to financial matters. For this reason, notwithstanding the fact that they are only incidentally record-keeping officers, they have been included in this guide to county archives, in the belief that the addition of these officers will be found useful to many persons who desire to use the archives.

THE AUDITOR

In all financial matters the archives of the auditor are most important. For although the treasurer is custodian of the money and the ⁷Fol. Code (1872), § 1543.

⁸Code Amdts. 1880 : 31.

assessor and tax collector are closely connected with the raising of the county's revenue, it is the auditor who is responsible for all money received or paid out in the name of the county. He does not himself handle the county's funds, but is entrusted with the responsibility of seeing that these funds are used in a legal manner. He has, therefore, records dealing with all phases of the financial affairs of the county. In many cases these records duplicate similar ones kept by the treasurer, tax collector or assessor and not infrequently records once used by these officers are deposited with the auditor after they have ceased to be of immediate use to their particular office. For these reasons it has not always been possible to distinguish records which have originated in the auditor's office from those of other officers. On account of the similarity of the records these errors, however, are unimportant.

Assessment Rolls. The assessment rolls usually occupy the greater part of the office of the auditor since the law requires that after these books have been made up by the assessor and the taxes gathered by the collector the books shall be given into the charge of the auditor. In general these are divided into original, duplicate, delinquent and personal property assessment rolls. These are records covering the whole county. In addition to these are to be found special books for school, sanitary, irrigation, or lighting districts, and towns. Accompanying the assessment rolls there are usually one or more volumes of indexes to the names of property owners.

The original assessment rolls are of value in showing the distribution of property and the development of property values. In about two-thirds of the counties these records have been found for the first years of the organization of the county. In the early years the records show that the assessor took particular pains to set down in detail the exact nature of the property as well as its total assessed value. When this was done the assessor's rolls partook of the nature of an annual census of agricultural and industrial products. The published reports of the state surveyor-general before 1880 give much of this data in statistical tables, but the assessment rolls are valuable for distributing the amounts and items among the various individual taxpayers, and for this reason are very useful to one who desires to make a detailed study of any county or community. Unfortunately, during recent years it has become the tendency for assessors to describe the property only in general terms, giving the total valuation of real estate, improvements and personal property. In this case much less definite information can be acquired from the assessment rolls.

Bonds. Since the great part of the money spent by the county for improvements upon schools, highways, etc., is raised by means of the sale of bonds, a record of these is kept by the auditor. This record is frequently in the form of a register, which gives the character and denomination of the bond, name of purchaser, date of maturity, and date of sale. In addition to the register it is, usually, the custom to paste in scrapbooks all interest coupons as well as the canceled bond itself as soon as they have been paid by the county.

Care of Dependents. The county assists in the care and support of those persons who through unfortunate circumstances are unable to provide for themselves. In the administration of the funds dealing with this matter several record books are to be found in the county archives; among these are books relating to the county hospital, aged indigents, and the support of orphans and half-orphans. The former relates to the county hospital as an institution whereas the latter deal with individual cases which are wholly or partially supported by the county and state outside of its institutions. They frequently contain much information regarding the dependent persons and their families.

License Record. Licenses, unless determined by statute, are fixed by the board of supervisors and collected, in general, by the county tax collector. The auditor, however, keeps a record of all licenses issued and of all funds received from the sale of licenses. In some of the counties the license records are practically complete from early dates and may be found useful in tracing the development of those lines of business for which a license has been required.

Tax Sales and Redemptions. The subject of tax sales and redemptions of land sold for taxes is too great to be handled here. In the discussion in relation to the archives of the recorder the subject was quite fully considered.* The more common titles found in the auditor's office are: Record or certificates of tax sales, delinquent tax record, and redemption of land sold for taxes.

School Funds. Records dealing with the school funds are found in the offices of the superintendent of schools, the treasurer, and the auditor. On account of the fact that all three of these officials are in some way concerned in the transaction affecting school funds it is difficult at times to distinguish the books kept by the separate officers. Since one set of records is a check upon the others they must of necessity be very similar. The fact is that in many cases they are practically identical. These records relate to school bonds, school district funds, teachers' annuity fund, apportionment of school money, warrants, superintendent's fee books, and others of a similar nature.

Warrant Books. Records dealing with warrants are of two kinds: One a register of warrants; the other a record of registered warrants. The former is merely a record of claims paid by the treasurer, usually showing the name of the claimant, the amount of the warrant, the nature of the service by which it was incurred and the date of payment, with the signature of the claimant as a receipt for the amount. The record of registered warrants relates to those warrants which have been presented for payment when no funds were available for meeting the amount of the claim. In this case the warrants are registered and paid, in the order of registration, as soon as money is available in the fund against which they were issued. In actual practice the term Register of Warrants and Registered Warrants are often used indiscriminately.

THE TREASURER

In addition to those records which have been considered in the treatment of the auditor's office there are others belonging more distinctly in the office of the treasurer. For the purpose of keeping a record of the transactions of his office as well as a check upon the different funds belonging to the county, the treasurer has a number of general record books including a cash book, day book or journal, and a ledger. Although records of this character have been kept by each of the counties from the date of organization an examination of the archives reveals the fact that not all of the books have been preserved. Many of the early volumes have long since become destroyed or lost. On the other hand, due to the careless use of the loose-leaf system, many of these records for recent years are in danger of being destroyed at any time. The rule should be rigidly enforced that as soon as a volume of a loose-leaf record has become completed it should immediately be bound in a permanent manner and properly labeled.

Inheritance Tax Records. In 1893 the legislature passed an act establishing a tax on collateral inheritances, bequests, and devises. The amount of the tax was determined by the market value of the estate or fixed by appraisers appointed by the court for that purpose. The tax was collected by the county treasurer and the money thus acquired paid over to the controller twice a year. The probate department of the superior court contains records relating to the property of deceased persons and with them records relating to the inheritance tax. From this court the treasurer is also furnished with a record of appraisements in order to assist him in collecting the proper amount of the tax. Receipts of all money paid for taxes are kept by the treasurer.¹

School Funds. The treasurer's records in reference to public schools are of a twofold character: Those relating to the administration of school funds; and those relating to the sale of state school lands. Under the former heading are to be found school district accounts, cash books, and ledgers; records relating to the bonding of school districts; and those concerning the teachers' annuity and retirement fund.

State Land Sales. By action of Congress the states were given control over a large part of the public domain. This included the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections in each township, in addition to another 500,000-acre grant, which were set aside as school lands. There were also all swamp and overflowed, tide and salt-marsh lands within the state. Since payments upon lands sold by the state were made through the county treasurer the archives of that officer usually contain separate records dealing with the sales of public lands within the county. As most of this land was school land the record most frequently found is in reference to the sale of school lands. In addition to these, swamp land books are frequently found. These books are often valuable records for anyone making a study of the land question or the early settlement of the region.

THE ASSESSOR

The chief function of the office of the assessor has always been to determine the value of property subject to taxation within the county, to the end that the taxes of the county may be equitably distributed among the property holders. In addition to this task he was, during the earlier years, given other duties which now fall exclusively to other officers. As seen in the section regarding the duties of the clerk, the assessor was required to assist in the registration of voters.¹¹ This was doubtless due to the fact that his work throughout the county brought him in contact with a very large portion of the population. This was an important consideration in the days when roads were few and poor.

A more peculiar function was attached to the assessor's office during the years from 1853 to 1855 when he was made ex-officio county superintendent of schools.¹² There is so little in common between appraising the value of taxable property and supervising the education of children that this combination of offices seems strange. Yet it must be remembered that during these years the educational system of the state was in a very embryonic stage, there were few schools to supervise, while on the other hand great amounts of school lands within the counties were yet unsold. No one was in a better position to know the location and status of the ownership of these lands than was the county assessor.

The duties of the assessor are such that few records remain in his archives. His chief work is to levy assessments on property within the county, the results being incorporated in the assessment rolls which, after being used by the tax collector, are finally deposited in the archives of the auditor. In order to assist him in making proper assessments the assessor frequently has a number of records which are themselves of value to the research worker.

¹¹Above, p. 34, n. 18.

Assessment Statements. Statements or affidavits made by property owners in regard to the ownership and valuation of their property form a large part of the records of the assessor's office in many of the counties. In five counties—Calaveras, Humboldt, Mendocino, San Joaquin and Yuba—these records date back to the fifties and sixties. In the other counties they are relatively recent, the earlier lists having been destroyed. The information contained in these statements is similar to that of the assessment rolls. The field notes of the assessor and deputies serve as a check against these statements.

Land Office Returns. One of the methods by which the assessor keeps informed in reference to the changes in ownership of lands is by securing reports of patents issued by the federal and state land offices. A record of this character is to be found in about one-third of the counties. It varies in form between large loose-leaf sheets containing the list of land entries, bound volumes for record under townships and sections, and a card index system. When access can not be had to the land office records themselves these records are useful in matters pertaining to the settlement and ownership of land.

Poll Tax Records. Before the abolition of the poll tax in 1914, the assessor was charged with the duty of collecting this tax. This was a tax levied by the state upon each able-bodied man between the ages of twenty-one and sixty for the benefit of the state school fund. In connection with this was the county road tax levied by the board of supervisors. The utility of the records relating to these taxes consists chiefly in their furnishing names of men residing within the county at the date of the record. As a rule they are less complete and are less uniformly found in the counties than is the great register of voters. Since the poll tax included all able-bodied men between the ages specified, regardless of citizenship or their right to vote, the poll tax records supplement the other records by containing names not found in the great register.

Maps. The maps and plat books used by the assessor in keeping a record of owners of real estate are frequently of considerable historical value if, as in a few counties, they have been preserved for earlier years. Together with the regular plat books the assessor very frequently has in his archives early town plats, maps of districts within the county, or maps of private ranches or holdings. Unfortunately, but few of the assessors make it a point to preserve the older maps. In San Diego County an effort is made to obtain copies of all maps relating to the county or of land surveys within the county. The result is a most valuable collection of maps and surveys of value both to the research worker and to the officials of the county.

THE TAX COLLECTOR

As is implied in the name, the chief function of the tax collector is to collect the taxes for the county. Some of these, however, as in the case of the tax on personal property unsecured by real estate and in former years the poll and road tax, are collected by the assessor. By a constitutional amendment adopted in 1910 the state and county tax system was divided, the county receiving all funds from taxes on general property, the state being supported by a tax on corporations. In addition to county taxes the tax collector gathers the tax on all public corporations outside of incorporated cities and any other general taxes required by the state. He is also required to collect all county license fees as well as all state licenses except those granted by the county clerk. In case the tax on property is not paid within the legal time limits the tax collector is required to sell the property to the state.

Most of the records of the tax collector consist of cash books, journals, balance records, ledgers, receipts and other books used by him to keep a check upon the amount of money passing through his hands. From the financial viewpoint they are of value, but to the average research worker they are apt to arouse but little interest.

For the purpose of collection of taxes the assessment roll for the current year is kept by the tax collector. It is afterwards deposited with the auditor. All taxes which remain unpaid at the end of the time allowed are recorded in a delinquent roll which is kept by the tax collector until the tax is paid or the property sold. The subject of tax sales and redemption of property sold for taxes has been considered more fully in dealing with the archives of the recorder.¹³

The license records, since they include all county and state licenses for saloons, peddlers, merchants, auctioneers, etc., are in many cases of value and interest since they give an index to the amount and kind of business done throughout the county.

The records of the tax collector are not usually looked upon as being of more than temporary value and, as a result, it is seldom that full sets of records are still to be found in the archives. Many of the tax collectors deposit all books with the auditor or in some storeroom as soon as their immediate usefulness was passed.

ALAMEDA COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

a County was created in 1853. Before that time a large territory was under the jurisdiction of Contra Costa County. Until 1853 extended as far south as Alameda Creek. At that time portions from Contra Costa and Santa Clara counties were taken to form the new county. No important changes have been made in the boundaries.

On the other hand, changes in the location of the county seat were made during the first two decades. Originally the seat of justice was located at Alvarado, or New Haven. Agitation, however, soon caused it to be moved further north and at an election in December, 1854, San Leandro was awarded the honor.

In April, 1855, the board of supervisors met at San Leandro and for several months this was the county seat. In August, however, by action of the District Court, the election was set aside on account of charges of fraud and the county seat was again moved to Alvarado. Since this was not pleasing to a large part of the population, the matter was taken to the legislature, which passed an act fixing the county seat at San Leandro, whither it was moved in March, 1856. The growth of Oakland led to further changes, with the result that an election early in 1873 chose that place as the center of justice. Opposition from the outside districts, which was reflected in the board of supervisors, caused the buildings to be located in Brooklyn (now East Oakland) rather than Oakland proper, as desired by the Oakland people. Appeal was once again made to the legislature, which, during the spring of 1874, passed an act under which the county buildings were to be erected upon the site now on Broadway.

Following these changes the county archives were moved from place to place. In 1874 the present courthouse was built. In common with buildings of its age and style it is not fireproof. It is now used for various rooms and contains some of the county offices, the Assessor and Collector being located on the first floor. A hall of records on Broadway contains all of the other offices examined. Alterations in the hall of records have been made since the information for this report was compiled. A large addition of reinforced concrete has been made to the first floor of which is occupied by the Clerk.

Alterations have materially affected much of the semi-discarded records which is shown in the report to have been in the basement.

That which is listed as being in the south basement has since been overhauled and some material, of seemingly worthless nature, has been destroyed, the remainder being classified and arranged on shelves. This basement is at the south end of the Hall of Records, and is under the custody of the clerk. The material reported in the north basement for the most part has been lost, the grand jury having ordered its removal, without consulting the officials under whose custody it belonged. These records were of little administrative value, but many of them would have been useful for historical purposes. This part of the basement is no longer used for storing records. Unless specified otherwise, the term "basement" as used in this report will refer to the basement of the particular office whose archives are being described. The examination of these archives has been made at various times, the Clerk's and Recorder's offices being examined during December, 1915, the other offices during the spring of 1917.

Printed form books are used almost exclusively, each volume being numbered in its own series. Since several books may have been used at one time the dates overlap, and the use of half numbers or letters on volumes makes it impossible to ascertain whether or not the series is complete without a careful examination and comparison of each volume. Theoretically, all these volumes form one main series. The current volume at the time they were examined was the number given above.

ALPINE COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Alpine has the distinction of being the smallest county in the state, the population being less than 350. The county was created in 1864, during the time of the mining excitement in that region, at which time the population ran well up into the thousands. There have been no changes in the boundary lines. At the time of the organization of the county in 1864, Silver Mountain was selected as the county seat, but by Stats. 1863-4:178; Pol. Code (1872), §3931; (1919), §3910.

1875 the population of the town had decreased to such an extent that the seat of government was moved to Markleeville, where it has since remained.

Until 1898 the county rented buildings for the courts and county offices. In 1886 the I. O. O. F. Hall in Markleeville was leased for a courthouse, and in 1898 the building was purchased by the county for $500. It is a wooden building of two stories, the greater part of the upper floor being used for a general assembly and lodge room. The court room and offices of the various officials, except the Superintendent of Schools, are located on the first floor. The offices of Clerk, Auditor and Recorder are combined. There is one large main office, which is used by all the officers except the Sheriff-Tax Collector. Adjoining this main office is a small brick vault with iron shutters and double iron door with combination lock. The greater part of the records are stored in this vault and would probably, though not certainly, be safe in case of fire. A few of the older records are relegated to a small room on the second floor. The records of the Superintendent of Schools are not kept in the courthouse.

The archives of the county are small in quantity, but the essential records seem to be kept in proper shape. The fixtures of the various offices are not of the most modern design, except a small set of filing boxes and book shelves in the vault. Gas is used for lighting purposes, and the heat is furnished by wood stoves.

The examination of the archives was made in July, 1917.

AMADOR COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Under the terms of an act passed May 10, 1854, Amador County was created from territory which, up to that time, had belonged to Calaveras County. Its original territory included that part of the present county which lies south of Dry Creek, as well as a considerable portion of what is now Alpine County. By subsequent legislation the northern line was shifted northward to the Cosumnes River. The development of the country lying east of the Sierra Nevada during the early sixties led to the creation of several new counties, one of these being Alpine, which was separately organized in 1864. The greater portion of Alpine was taken from Amador County, reducing that county to about three-fifths of its former area. Since the time of its organization the county seat has remained at Jackson.

Two buildings connected by a bridge are used to house the county offices. The older is built of brick and stone, the newer of brick and concrete. They stand on the corner of a block not far distant from numerous wooden buildings. Practically all of the records are in the newer building, since it is considered fireproof. This building would probably be able to withstand fire from the outside, but the use of much wood in the interior finish prevents the interior being considered fireproof. Gas and electricity are used for lighting purposes, while the rooms are heated by wood stoves. Vaults are not provided except in the Treasurer's office. The archives were examined in July, 1916.

BUTTE COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Butte County was one of the original counties into which the state was divided in 1850. Since at that time Colusa was also attached to Butte County for administrative purposes, its archives also contain records for Colusa County for the year 1850-1851. Many changes have been made in the county boundaries since 1850, for Plumas, Lassen, Tehama, Glenn and Sutter each contain territory which was once a part of this county; the chief changes, however, were in 1854 when more than half of the original county was cut off and organized under the name of Plumas County, and in 1856 when, upon the organization of Tehama County, a large portion of the northwestern part of the county was added to that county.

During the early years the county seat was subject to frequent changes. The original act permitted the voters to choose between Chico and Butte City; the people, however, preferred neither of these places, hence much confusion. In July, 1850, the administrative center was temporarily placed at Chico, only to be moved the next month to Bidwell Bar, where it remained until Hamilton was made the county seat by a second popular election held in September. The county seat was at Hamilton from October, 1850, to August, 1853, when by legislative act it was again removed to Bidwell Bar. Here it remained until, by a vote of the people, it was established at Oroville in 1856.

The courthouse is built of stone and stands in the center of a block three hundred feet square. A portion of it was built in 1856, to which an addition, which houses the offices of Clerk, Auditor and Recorder, was made in 1878. In general it may be said to be safe against outside fires, particularly the newer portion of the building. Its interior construction, however, does not render it free from the danger of fires originating within the building. The building is heated by steam and lighted by electricity. The equipment in the main offices is modern and convenient.

The shifting of the county seat has resulted in the loss of a number of papers and documents which probably otherwise would still be in the archives. Some of these have been preserved in private collections. Furthermore, the crowded condition of the offices has caused many of the older records, as well as a large number of more recent ones, to be placed in store rooms which are not suitable for this purpose, since they are not fireproof and dust and mice do their work of destruction. These storerooms are designated in the report as the "attic," which is located on the second floor; "the jail," two cells of which are devoted to archive purposes; and the "basement," which is in reality merely a brick tunnel, with steel door but dirt floor, under the courthouse.

The archives were examined in June, 1916.

CALAVERAS COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Calaveras is one of the original counties, having been created in 1850. Its territory at that time was several times larger than at present, for it has subsequently contributed heavily to the territory of Amador, Mono and Alpine counties. The county seat has shifted between four towns. In 1850 it was placed at Double Springs, but later in the year was moved to Jackson where it remained until 1852, when it was removed to Mokelumne Hill, then an important mining center. In 1864 a fire is said to have destroyed a number of the older records. In 1866 the county seat was transferred to San Andreas, its present location.

The county offices are located in the courthouse and building adjoining it in the rear, the two buildings being connected by a bridge. Both buildings are constructed of brick, but, on account of their proximity to other buildings, can not be considered fireproof. Much wood is used in the interior finish and they are heated by wood stoves. They are lighted by electricity.

The archives of this county were examined in August, 1916.

COLUSA COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Colusa County was created in 1850, but was not separately organized until 1851. As originally created it corresponded roughly to what is now Glenn County, including that part of Tehama lying west of the river and south of Red Bluffs, its southern line running several miles north of the city of Colusa. In 1851 the southern boundary was placed nearly as it stands at present. Subsequent legislation has diminished the area of the county by cutting off portions at its northern end, first in 1856 when Tehama was formed, in 1891 when Glenn County was detached. Another change on the west in 1868 gave to Lake County an area which had for some time been a matter of dispute. Since 1893 there has been no change in the boundaries.

The first county government was organized, somewhat irregularly, in 1851, with the seat of government at Monroe's Rancho, or Monroeville. In the same year the legislature named Colusa as the county seat, but the government remained at Monroeville, under color of a somewhat dubious election held that year, and it was not until after the election in 1853 that Colusa became the actual seat of the county government, as it has been since that date.

In 1854 the first courthouse, a frame building, was erected at a cost of $3,000. Ten years later this was replaced by the present courthouse, built of brick and wood, and costing about $19,000. In 1877 some additional room was provided for the county officials by the fitting up for that purpose of the old jail building. In 1882 a Hall of Records was built and was used until 1915, when the present Hall of Records was completed. The latter is a splendid building of concrete and steel, costing about $50,000. In it are located the offices of the Clerk-Recorder, Auditor and Surveyor, and the Supervisors' room, and in the basement the County Library and two large rooms which provide a safe, dry place for the storage of a large quantity of the older records from the various offices, one room being used by the Clerk-Recorder and Superintendent of Schools and the other by the remaining officials. Very few record books are kept in the offices in the courthouse except those which are now being used.

Both buildings are lighted by electricity. In the Hall of Records a gas heating system is installed; in the courthouse wood stoves are used.

The archives of this county were examined in January, 1917.

CONTRA COSTA COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Contra Costa County was one of the original twenty-seven counties into which the state was divided by the first legislature in 1850. Its territory at that time extended as far south on San Francisco Bay as Alameda Creek (Niles Canyon), and hence received its name, meaning the opposite coast. With the formation of Alameda County in 1853 it assumed in general its present limits.

Martinez was selected as the county seat at the time of the formation of the county and maintained that distinction ever since. In 1854 a courthouse was erected. This was supplemented in 1875 by a separate building, situated upon an adjacent lot, which contained the offices of the Clerk and Recorder of the county.

The present courthouse was first occupied in 1903. It is a substantially built stone structure standing in the middle of a small-sized city block. It may therefore be considered reasonably safe from fire. Within the building the furnishings are such as to give a very neat appearance and also to be proof against fire. The books are kept on metal roller cases, while the papers are in metal filing boxes.

Notwithstanding the fact that the building was so recently erected it has already been found too small for the growing business of the county. A small storeroom in the basement contains a great quantity of old records and papers, the latter being stored in boxes. Much material was lost or destroyed at the time the present courthouse was being occupied.

The archives were examined in November, 1915, and June, 1917.

DEL NORTE COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Del Norte County was created in 1857. Before that time it had been within the limits of Trinity County, and later in Klamath County. Del Norte at first included much territory upon the upper Klamath River around Happy Camp. In 1887, however, the eastern boundary was shifted further west and all of this region given to Siskiyou County. The county seat has always been at Crescent City.

The courthouse stands in the center of a large block and is separated from other buildings except a wooden shed, or storehouse, in the rear. It is constructed of wood and is therefore not fireproof. The hazard is increased by the use of wood stoves for heating purposes. A good-sized vault, however, is provided and the attempt is made to keep the greater part of the more valuable records in it. It is located off the office of the Recorder and Auditor and most of his records are kept in it. This is also the case with the older records of the Clerk and other officials. The clerk also has recently had installed an enclosed steel cabinet for his court record books. Just how safe the records would be should the building burn, is a matter of speculation. The danger from fire within the vault is increased by the necessity of using candles for lighting purposes during practically the entire day.

The archives of this county were examined in October, 1917.

EL DORADO COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

El Dorado was one of the original counties into which the state was divided by the act of February 18, 1850. Since then several changes have been made in its boundaries, in nearly all of which El Dorado has lost something to adjacent newer counties: Amador County, created in 1854, took from El Dorado that portion of its territory lying between Dry Creek and the Cosumnes River, while approximately one-third of Alpine County was taken from El Dorado in 1863 and 1864. The first county seat was Coloma, which, through the prestige gained by the original gold discovery, was the only applicant for the place. After a spirited contest Placerville was given the county seat in 1857, and has retained the honor since that date.

In 1861 buildings for the county offices were purchased. Just how long these served is not known. A courthouse was destroyed by fire on May 15, 1910, and many of the records at that time were burned. During the years 1910-1912, before the present building was completed, the county offices were located in various places. During these changes, many of the volumes became misplaced, and were considered burned until discovered during the examination made by the Historical Survey Commission. The present courthouse was accepted in December, 1912, and is apparently fireproof, although much wood is used in the interior construction and the lot upon which the building stands did not permit its being placed far from other buildings. It is lighted by electricity and furnished with steam heat.

In general the filing cases and book shelves are modern and fireproof, although a few of the papers are filed in pasteboard filing boxes. With the exception of the offices of the Treasurer and the Tax Collector, there are no vaults. Many older semi-discarded records were found in the basement. The basement has a cement floor and is used in part as a jail. One room has been set apart for older records and is referred to throughout this report as the Clerk's basement. It contains a large number of miscellaneous volumes, many of them showing the effects of the fire. Besides those books there are many others stored away in a small room below the stairs leading down from the Sheriff's office. This is referred to in the report as the Sheriff's basement. Among these latter books were found many old and interesting documents as well as some of present value. They had been misplaced in the confusion at the time of the fire in 1910, and since then had not been located. They were restored to their proper places and are so listed in the report.

This courthouse was examined in May, 1916.

FRESNO COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Fresno County was created April 19, 1856, from territory which previously had been within the limits of Mariposa, Merced and Tulare counties. Although the boundaries of the county have been modified nearly a dozen times since the date of its organization, most of the changes have been relatively unimportant. Two changes, however, greatly reduced the area of the county. The first of these was in 1861 when all of the territory lying east of the Sierras was detached to form a part of Mono County; the other in 1893, when Madera County was formed from that part of Fresno County north of the San Joaquin River.

By the act creating the county, the seat of justice was placed at Millerton. A courthouse was built in 1866 and during the same year a jail was also erected. These buildings were of brick and stone. By an election held March 23, 1874, the county seat was moved to Fresno. For a year the records were housed in a temporary structure until the new courthouse was ready for occupancy in August, 1875. In 1888 the courthouse was remodeled by the addition of wings to the original building, besides some other changes. On July 29, 1895, fire did much damage to the building and some of the Clerk's records were scorched; however only a few of the records were destroyed.

The courthouse stands near the center of a large park made up of four city blocks. It is built of stone, concrete and wood, but is not fireproof, as its past history shows. Some of the offices have vaults, but these hold only a small part of their records. The building is heated by steam and lighted by electricity. The filing-cases and book-racks range in all degrees from the old style wooden cases to modern steel ones. Some of the older records are stored in two rooms in the basement where they are subject to dust and damage from rough handling, as they are piled up without regard to order. Some of these are of much value, although others are of little importance.

The examination of these archives was made in September, 1917.

GLENN COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Glenn County was organized in 1891, having been formed of territory cut off from the northern part of Colusa County. The boundaries at first included the town of Princeton and adjacent territory, but this was soon after returned to the parent county. The town of Willows has been the county seat from the first.

The courthouse was built in 1894. It is substantially constructed of brick and wood, occupying the central part of the courthouse square. It is safe from outside fires, but like other buildings of its kind and date can not be considered fireproof so far as interior construction is concerned. There are two large vaults used by the Clerk and Auditor-Recorder, and a smaller one in the Treasurer's office, and the greater part of the records of these officers are kept in the vaults. The quantity of records is not as yet large, but additional space will soon be needed by some of the officials. The building is heated by gas, and electric lights are used.

The archives were examined in February, 1917.

HUMBOLDT COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

The territory now within the limits of Humboldt County has, since the organization of the state, been a part of three counties and, for a short time, was loosely joined to a fourth. At the first division of the state into counties, in 1850, all that portion of the state north of 40° was roughly made into two counties, Trinity and Shasta, the summit of the Coast Range being given as the division line. Trinity being almost an unknown region, it was joined to Shasta for judicial purposes.

In 1851 Trinity County was organized independently for the first time, but by then the excitement in the Klamath mining region led to the division of its territory, the northern half being designated and organized as Klamath County. The county seat of Trinity County was fixed at Weaverville. The rapid settlement of the coast region made a further division of the territory desirable, and in 1853 the western portion of Trinity was cut off and formed into Humboldt County. In 1874-1875 the last important change in territory was made when a portion of the disorganized Klamath County was annexed to Humboldt.

The location of the county seat was the cause of much rivalry among the early towns. Uniontown (Arcata) was given the honor in 1853, but the contest continued until 1856, when by act of the legislature the county seat was placed at Eureka. A courthouse and other buildings were not erected until after the removal to Eureka, when a brick building was erected for that purpose, and is still used as a storehouse for some of the old records.

The present courthouse was built in 1886, and stands in the center of a block formerly used as a public plaza. It is constructed of brick and from without is little endangered from fire. The offices of the clerk, recorder and auditor are provided with metal book shelves and filing boxes, in the other offices the fixtures are nearly all of wood, and in them all a fire arising within the building could gain great headway. Some of the records of the clerk and recorder and all those of the treasurer are kept in safes or vaults, but with the exception of the latter office these are large enough for only a small part of the records. The building is lighted by electricity and heated by steam.

. Most of the offices are now overcrowded and many of the records not in actual use are relegated to the attic or to the old courthouse, where dust, mice or other agencies may do their work of destruction. At the suggestion of the Historical Survey Commission, the grand jury of the county has recommended the construction of a hall of records for the better organization and preservation of the records. The examination of these archives was made in October, 1915.

IMPERIAL COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Imperial County was created in 1907 under a general law adopted that year, and includes that portion of what was previously San Diego County, lying east of the line between ranges 8 and 9 east of San Bernardino meridian. Since its formation El Centro has been the county seat.

The courthouse was first occupied in January, 1908. It stands on the main business street, closely adjoining other buildings on both sides. The courthouse is constructed of brick, but much woodwork is used. It is therefore not fireproof from either outside or inside fires. Vaults, however, are used for a large portion of the records. Electric lights are used and the building is heated by steam heat, the heating plant being removed from the main building.

With a few exceptions the filing cases and other office equipment are modern and convenient, but the offices of Auditor, Assessor and Treasurer are badly crowded.

These archives were examined during April, 1917.

INYO COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Inyo County was created by an act of the Legislature approved in 1866. Two years earlier this had been set apart from Mono and Tulare counties and designated "Coso County." This county, however, was never organized, and on March 22, 1866, an act was approved by Governor Low creating Inyo County from the same territory. Two changes have been made in its boundaries, the first in 1870 when an act was passed changing the northern boundary from Big Pine Creek to the present line; the other in 1872 when the southern boundary was placed upon the sixth standard south of Mount Diablo base line. The county seat has always been at Independence.

The first courthouse was built in 1866 and was used until destroyed by earthquake, March 26, 1872. A new courthouse was immediately erected which, however, was destroyed by fire on June 30, 1886. Almost all of the county records, however, were saved, due to the presence of mind of two women. On February 10, 1887, the third courthouse was accepted and has been used since that time. It is a two-story frame structure, set off from other buildings and is well protected by a very efficient water system. There is but one vault, in which are kept the books of all the county officers with the exception of those of the Treasurer, who has a separate vault. The main vault is well lighted by electricity and well ventilated; modern steel filing cases and boxes are used exclusively and the record books are kept free from dust. Some of the files of the Supervisors are kept in a room on the upper floor of the courthouse, and other of the older records, assessment rolls, mining location notices, ledgers, etc., are stored in a room on the upper floor of the concrete jail building, where they are piled in such a way that they are liable to mold and gather dust. This county was examined during June, 1916.

KERN COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Kern County was organized in 1866 from parts of Los Angeles and Tulare counties, with the seat of justice at Havilah. In 1874 the county seat was moved to Bakersfield, where it has remained. For a short time the seat of government was in the town hall in Bakersfield, located on the present sight of the Beale Memorial Library. A new courthouse was built in 1876. This building was used until the present one was ready for use in 1912.

The present courthouse is a beautiful building occupying two city blocks. Built of stone, brick and steel, it is practically fireproof. It is surrounded on all sides by wide streets. It is steam heated and lighted by electricity. The equipment, book cases, filing cabinets, etc., is with few exceptions of modern steel structure. Most of the offices have small vaults, but these hold only a very small percentage of the records and no effort is made to give them more protection than that afforded by the offices. Many of the older records are piled just as they were moved from the old courthouse, without any attempt at an orderly arrangement, in two rooms in the basement. The records are practically safe in these rooms from everything except dust and the wear and tear of searching through them. The confused jumble makes it very difficult to find out how complete the records are, and any attempt to find an old record is very apt to result in books being thrown around and torn and otherwise damaged. With very little effort and cost, this material could be arranged so it would be free from most of the damage just noted. These records contain a great deal of very valuable material.

The Recorder's office is in the Hall of Records, which was built in 1907. It, too, is practically fireproof, although on two sides it is close to buildings which are not. It is steam heated and lighted by electricity. It is equipped with very modern steel book cases, filing cabinets, etc. Its arrangement and equipment leave little to be desired.

The examination of the archives was made during June, 1916.

KINGS COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Kings County was set off from Tulare County in 1893. In 1909 it was given its present boundaries when a part of Fresno County was added. Hanford has been the county seat from the formation of the county. From 1893 to 1897 the county offices were located in various parts of the city, no one building being adequate to accommodate all of them.

In 1896 the cornerstone was laid for the present courthouse, into which the county records were moved the next year. To this building an addition was made in 1914. The courthouse is located upon a city block upon which are also the jail and two private houses. It is a building with two stories and a basement, constructed of stone, steel and brick with considerable wood finishings. It is safe from fire from outside and, while not fireproof within, it may be considered reasonably safe.

It is heated by steam and electrically lighted. The offices are equipped with vaults, though in no instance do these hold all the records of the office. Some of the book racks and filing cases are of old wooden types, but for the most part new steel racks and cases are used.

As may be inferred from the date of formation of the county, there is not the great mass of old records that are to be found in the older counties. However, the basement is being used to store some of the older materials. Very little of this material is of much value.

The examination of these archives was made in July, 1916.

KLAMATH COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Klamath County was organized by a legislative act passed April 21, 1851, and included that portion of the state of California lying north of a line running due east from the mouth of Mad River, and west of the summit of the Coast Range Mountains. The next year more than one-fourth of this area, along the upper Klamath River, was detached to form a part of Siskiyou County. The county seat was moved three times during the first five years of the county's history, it being located at Trinidad, 1851-1854, Crescent City, 1854-1855, and then at Orleans Bar, 1855-1875.

From the very beginning elements were noticeable which later brought about the division and disorganization of the county. Communication was difficult; the shifting mining population, unstable; and the officials often inefficient or corrupt. The district around Crescent City, being dissatisfied at the removal of the county seat in 1855, secured the formation of a new county, named Del Norte, in 1857. Extravagant and corrupt administration threatened financial ruin, so that by act of the legislature, dated March 28, 1874, the county was dissolved.

It was provided in the act that the disincorporation of the county should depend on the approval of the two counties, Humboldt and Siskiyou, which were to share in the distribution of the territory and likewise the debt. Both counties approved of the annexations, but the representatives of Siskiyou failed to meet with those of Humboldt at the time appointed for the final adjustment, so that by action of the court the debt was apportioned and the records turned over to Humboldt County.

The archives of the county, probably not very extensive at their best, have suffered much through the various migrations of the county seat. They are at present under the jurisdiction of the Clerk, Recorder and Auditor of Humboldt County. As indicated in the report, they are distributed among these three offices, some, however, being placed in the old courthouse, which is used as a storeroom by the county officials. When the location of the records is other than the office under which they are listed, the exception has been noted in the report. The remarks or comments that are given regarding the care and safety of the Humboldt County records apply likewise to these.

LAKE COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Lake County was organized in 1861, having been formed from the northern half of Napa County as it then existed. The boundary lines have been changed several times, three of these changes being of especial importance. Two of them resulted in annexations, one in 1864 when the upper Eel River area was added, and the other in 1868 when the Long Valley section was annexed. On the other hand, in 1872 the greater part of Knoxville township was detached and placed again in Napa County.

Lakeport was by election made the county seat in 1861. A second election in 1864 confirmed this decision, but in 1867 as the result of a third election, which was contested, the county officials moved to Lower Lake, where they remained for three years, during which time the question was being fought out in the courts and before the legislature. A final election in 1870 gave a majority for Lakeport, and that town has from that date been the county seat.

The first courthouse, a wooden affair of two stories, was built in 1861. It was burned to the ground, together with every vestige of the county records except one book of the Treasurer, in February of 1867, shortly before the county seat election of that year. The second (and present) courthouse was built in 1870 at a cost of about $20,000. It has brick walls, but most of the interior is of wood. There is little danger of fire from the outside. All of the county offices, except those of the Recorder and Treasurer, are located in this building. There is a vault in the Clerk's office, where are kept the greater part of the court records, except the file. There is a small storeroom adjoining the Sheriff's office, but little of value is to be found in it. The same may be said of a small storeroom on the second floor.

The Recorder's and Treasurer's offices are located in a small brick building just north of the courthouse. This was built in 1895 at a cost of about $2,000. There is a small vault in the Treasurer's office, but only about a third of the records are kept in it. The book shelves and filing cases in the Recorder's office are of the usual type. The filing cases and one small set of book shelves in the Clerk's office are also of metal and of recent type. None of the other offices have modern fixtures. Electric lights are used in both buildings, and heat is furnished by wood stoves. The archives of the county were examined in April, 1917.

LASSEN COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Lassen County was first created April 1, 1864, from territory which before that time had been portions of Plumas and Shasta counties. Since its organization the boundaries have remained practically as they are now, while the county seat has always been at Susanville.

At the time the examination of these archives was made, July, 1916, a new courthouse was under construction. The records were then being housed in the county jail, a recent limestone structure, while the original courthouse was used by the contractors for storage purposes. The new building is of stone and concrete and is probably safe from outside fires. The building is to be lighted by electricity and heated by steam.

Most of the older records were in the vault and in good condition, although a number were found still in the old courthouse and some in a woodshed. What care was taken of these after the completion of the new building has not been learned.

LOS ANGELES COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Los Angeles was one of the original counties created at the first session of the legislature. Since the time of its organization its territory has been changed many times. From 1850-1851 its area was much smaller than at present, being located along the coast from the San Mateo Creek to the Triunfo Rancho, and inland to the summit of the Coast Range. The next year, however, a radical change was made in its boundaries. At this time the western boundary was defined much as it is now observed, but extended farther north to include the Tejon Rancho, thence extending northeasterly to the state boundary, and then southerly along this line to San Diego County, including therefore something more than the present San Bernardino County. The area of the county then was probably not less than 31,000 square miles. By subsequent legislation this area has been greatly reduced. In 1853 San Bernardino County took off a great extent of territory on the east; in 1866, Kern took from Los Angeles a part of its area; and in 1889 Orange County was detached and separately organized.

For a number of years the boundaries of Los Angeles County have been a matter of much uncertainty, owing to indefinite descriptions and to carelessness in making the surveys. This was especially true of the boundaries common to San Bernardino on the one side and to Ventura on the other. Neither of these lines as surveyed and observed conformed to the descriptions laid down in the Political Code. By an amendment to the code in 1919 these lines, together with the other county boundaries, were redefined and in some cases modified. These changes were, however, unimportant as regards the territory involved.

Since the beginning of the county, Los Angeles has remained the seat of justice. The courthouse is built of stone and wood, and stands upon an elevation near the business district of the city. Its interior construction is very largely of wood. It is not fireproof from within, and it is very doubtful if it would be able to stand the test of a severe fire in the surrounding buildings. Joining the courthouse on the west is a hall of records erected in 1908. This building is of reinforced concrete and of modern construction throughout, and may be considered fireproof. Practically all of the archives of the county are in the hall of records. The filing cases and equipment are in general modern and convenient, especially in the newer building. Vaults are used for but a very small portion of the archives.

Unfortunately, the great amount of business done in the county makes heavy demands upon archive space, with the result that older records have been destroyed as soon as they were deemed to be no longer of current value; consequently many of the older records found in other counties are not found here. On the other hand, it is possible that some of these may still be in existence, boxed and stored in warehouses or storerooms, unknown to the present officials and inaccessible to the research worker.

Many of the semi-discarded records are stored in the tower of the courthouse and in two or three rooms just below the tower. In general they are books and documents belonging to the Auditor and Superintendent of Schools. A number of volumes of Spanish record books were found in the archives of the Recorder and Clerk. For convenience, these are listed in one group under the heading, Pre-statehood Records. They are located in the Recorder's vault, or in the Clerk's private office.

The courteous manner in which the officers of the county assisted in the examination of the archives under their jurisdiction greatly facilitated the work, which would otherwise have been practically an impossible task for one unfamiliar with their offices. The examination of these archives was made in December, 1916.

MADERA COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Madera County was formed in 1893, being set off from Fresno County early in that year. Since that time, Madera City has been the county seat. The Superior Court and the Clerk's office were first located on the second floor of the Rosenthal-Kutner Building. The Tax Collector's and Assessor's offices were housed over the Bank of Madera, now the First National Bank. The Recorder's and all the remaining offices were located in the Dworack Building, now the Palace Lodging House. In 1895 the Recorder's office was moved to the Wells-Fargo Company express office, where it remained until the completion of the new courthouse in 1900. In 1897 all the other offices were moved to the Russ House, which was used until the courthouse was ready for use. Fire damaged the second story of the courthouse on December 24, 1906, and court was held in the Masonic Hall from December 31, 1906, until the courthouse was repaired.

The present courthouse is a substantial stone building standing in the center of a city block. It is entirely free from the menace of fire from the outside, but the fire which did a great deal of damage to the second story, is ample proof that the building is not fireproof.

The courthouse is lighted by electricity and heated by steam. The furnishings vary from modern steel filing cases and book racks to those of wood, the latter being most used. All of the offices have vaults or safes, but these will hold only a small per cent of the records, except in the case of the Clerk's office. A vault is used to store most of the Clerk's records, but the vault itself is not fireproof.

Many of the older records are stored in the basement. Some of these are in a dustproof showcase, but no special care is given most of them. A great many show the effect of the fire and damage by water. Some of the material is valuable.

These archives were examined in August, 1916.

MARIN COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Marin County was created by act of the first legislature, passed February 18, 1850, it being one of the original counties. Although the statute creating the county provided that until its organization it should be under the administration of Sonoma County, a subsequent enactment, passed April 22, 1850, provided for its separate organization. Since 1850 there have been no important changes in its boundaries and San Rafael has always been its seat of government.

The present courthouse, together with the Hall of Records, stands in the center of a block surrounded by trees and lawn. The courthouse is built of brick over a wooden framework, but the Hall of Records is of reinforced concrete. The ability of the courthouse to withstand fire would depend largely upon the severity of the test. The Hall of Records may be considered a fairly safe depository for the archives. Both buildings are lighted by electricity and heated by steam. Several vaults are provided, but they are not used as fully as they should be for the keeping of records. The offices of the Clerk and Recorder in the Hall of Records are well equipped with modern bookshelves and filing cases, but the offices of the older building are less well-provided. A few of the older records were found in the basement of the Hall of Records, which has a good cement floor and has good light and ventilation. The archives of this county were examined in January, 1916.

MARIPOSA COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Mariposa was one of the counties created in 1850, and included in general all that part of the San Joaquin Valley and Sierra Nevada region which had not already been assigned to other counties. It extended from Tuolumne County on the north to Los Angeles and San Diego on the south; from the Coast Range to the eastern boundary of the state. As the region became more populated large portions of the county were cut off. In 1852 more than half was detached to form Tulare County; in 1855 the western portion of the remainder was separately organized as Merced County; and in 1856 Fresno County, which then also included what is now Madera County, was created confining Mariposa to what are approximately her present narrow limits. In all, over a dozen counties claim territory which at one time was a part of Mariposa.

The county seat was originally placed at Aqua Fria, but in 1854, by vote of the people, it was removed to Mariposa, where it has since remained. At Aqua Fria a log cabin served as a courthouse, but upon the removal to Mariposa, a building was specially constructed for the county's business, and this building still remains, changed only by an addition at one end. The courthouse is built of wood and stands alone in a large square. The building is heated by wood stoves and lighted by electricity. Practically all of the archives are kept in two brick vaults opening into the Clerk's office by iron doors. The shelves and boxes in the smaller, inner vault are of wood; those in the larger vault, which is really a "hall of records," are of steel, modern in every respect, except the map cases, which are very poor. A few of the older records are stored in the attic, which is dusty and mice-infested. The examination of the archives was made in July, 1916.

MENDOCINO COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Mendocino was one of the original counties into which the state was divided in 1850, but it was not organized as a separate county until 1859, being until that time united to Sonoma County for judicial, revenue and administrative purposes. During these earlier years the boundaries of the county, especially to the east, were very uncertain and several changes were made before they were satisfactorily established. Before 1852 the territory around Clear Lake was apparently claimed by both Mendocino and Napa counties. In that year, however, the boundary between the two become more definitely fixed. In 1855 it was again changed at the expense of Mendocino. At the same time the Sonoma-Mendocino line was moved farther north. In 1859, when the county was organized, the boundaries were redefined very much as they have been up to the present, the only important change being made in 1864 when a portion of the head waters of Eel River were given to Lake County. Ukiah has been the county seat continuously since 1859, when the county government was first organized.

The first courthouse was erected in 1859 at a cost of $6,000, and served the county's needs until 1872, when the present courthouse was built. At first a part of the building was used as a jail, but in 1892 a separate jail was erected on the northwest corner of the courthouse square. In the same year the Hall of Records, occupying the southwest corner of the square, was completed. All of these buildings are solidly built of brick and are reasonably safe from outside fires. The Hall of Records consists of one large room and two small office rooms on either side of the entrance hall. The interior construction of the courthouse proper does not insure against fire. Electric lights are used in both buildings, but the heating is by means of wood stoves and fireplaces and these constitute a serious danger to the records. No vaults are used, except a small one in the Treasurer's office. All of the offices, except that of the Recorder, are badly overcrowded.

An old wooden building, fittingly described as a "shack," about half a block distant from the courthouse square, is used as a storeroom. This building is of the flimsiest construction, almost surrounded by other wooden buildings, and is about as unsafe a storage place for records as could be devised. An examination of this report will show what the building contains. Besides the records there were several drums and cans of oil and a large number of wooden frames and other inflammable material. Mold, dust and cobwebs are everywhere in evidence.

It should perhaps be added that at the time of this examination, in December, 1916, the Board of Supervisors had under consideration plans for additions to and modernization of the courthouse building.

MERCED COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Merced County was formed in 1855, being set off from Mariposa County at that time. Originally it was more than twice its present area, since it extended from Stanislaus on the north to Tulare on the south, Kings County not yet having been detached from the latter. The creation of Fresno County in 1856, however, reduced it to its present size.

The first election held within the county was on the "Second Monday of May, 1855." The county seat chosen at that time was "the ranch of Turner & Osborne on Mariposa Creek." Later in the same year it was moved to a place on Snelling's ranch, at which the nucleus of the town of Snelling, had been formed. By an election held December 12, 1872, Merced was chosen as the county seat. Since then the location has not been changed.

The first court met at the ranch of Turner & Osborne under the shade of some trees. On the removal of the county seat to Snelling, court was held in the hotel building until a courthouse could be built. Upon the selection of Merced as the county seat the records were moved to the second floor of a building on the corner of L and Fourth Streets. In July, 1874, they were taken to Washington Hall and were kept there until May, 1875, when the present courthouse was ready for use.

The courthouse stands in the center of a very attractive park of ten acres. It is a building of two stories and a basement. It is steam heated and electrically lighted. In 1914 a steel and concrete wing was added to the old building and some changes have been made, and others are being made in the interior arrangements; otherwise the building stands as completed in 1875.

Set off as it is from other buildings, there is no danger from fire from the outside. The inside, however, is in no sense fireproof. Book racks, file cases, etc., range from the most modern to the old wooden styles. Improvements in these, however, are being made. Most of the offices are furnished with vaults, but with two or three exceptions, these are not large enough to hold the records of the office. Partly because of lack of room, but more because the offices of the old building have been undergoing repairs for a year, many of the old records are stored in the Recorder's office and many more are piled in the "Tool House" and in the "Gasoline House." Many of these have in them much valuable material. As soon as the repair work is finished it is understood these records will be returned to the proper places.

This courthouse was examined in August, 1916.

MODOC COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Before its separate organization the territory now included in Modoc County was a part of two older counties: Shasta, 1850-1852, and Siskiyou, 1852-1874. By a statute of February 17, 1874, that portion of Siskiyou County lying east of the line between ranges four and five east of Mt. Diablo meridian was detached and formed into Modoc County. Since its formation no changes have been made in its boundaries. The county seat was fixed at Dorris Bridge, the name of the town being changed to Alturas in 1876.

Prior to 1914 the county records were kept in a wooden courthouse at the south end of Main Street. Fortunately, however, the building escaped the fire which early destroyed the town. The present courthouse is substantially built of concrete and stands alone on the block. It is, therefore, safe from outside fires, and its interior construction renders it reasonably safe from interior conflagration. For this reason vaults are not used for the keeping of the records. Steam and electricity furnish heat and light, and the filing cases, bookshelves and other equipment is, in general, modern and convenient.

Some of the older, semi-discarded material is kept in a blind room in the basement. The greater part of this is made up of loose papers, stub-books, etc., although there are also here several volumes of early court minutes and minutes of the Board of Supervisors. The room is provided with shelves, but the papers are not arranged in order. These archives were examined during July, 1916.

MONO COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Mono County was created by an act of the legislature, April 24, 1861, out of those portions of Calaveras, Mariposa and Fresno counties lying east of the Sierra Nevada Mountains. Since 1861 the boundaries of the county have been changed three times: the first in 1864, at the time of the formation of Alpine County; the others in 1866 and 1870, when portions were annexed to Inyo County. The first county seat was at Aurora, now in Nevada, but then supposed to be in Mono County. It was not until Nevada was admitted as a state and the lines actually surveyed, that the mistake was discovered. An election was held on June 24, 1864, to locate a new county seat. The choice lay between Owensville, now in Inyo County, and Bridgeport, the latter being selected. The records were then moved from Aurora, the minutes of the Board of Supervisors showing that the first meeting of that body in the new county seat was held September 1, 1864.

In 1880 a commodious courthouse was erected, the county's business outgrowing the smaller building theretofore used. This building contains the offices of all the county officials and is well fitted throughout. The danger from external fire is not great, due to the isolation of the courthouse from other buildings and to an excellent water system, but the courthouse itself is not fireproof. The offices are heated by means of wood stoves, and oil lamps are used for lighting. For each office, with the exception of the Assessor's, there is a vault containing the records of the office. The Assessor's records are kept in the Recorder's vault. The filing cases and boxes are of wood, and dust easily accumulates on the books and papers. Most of the files of the courts, many of the assessment rolls, and various mining records are stored in an upper room of the courthouse; while in a closet of the Sheriff's office are many records of the Tax Collector and Superintendent of Schools, which should be moved to their proper vaults. The examination of these archives was made in June, 1916.

MONTEREY COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Monterey was one of the original counties created in 1850. During the early years its southern boundary was changed several times, but none of these changes were of great importance. In 1874, however, San Benito County was created out of a part of Monterey County. Since that date the boundaries have remained the same. Originally the county seat was located at Monterey, which had for so long been the capital of the state under the earlier regime. After several years of struggle on the part of rival towns, especially Salinas and Castroville, the seat of justice was moved to Salinas early in 1873.

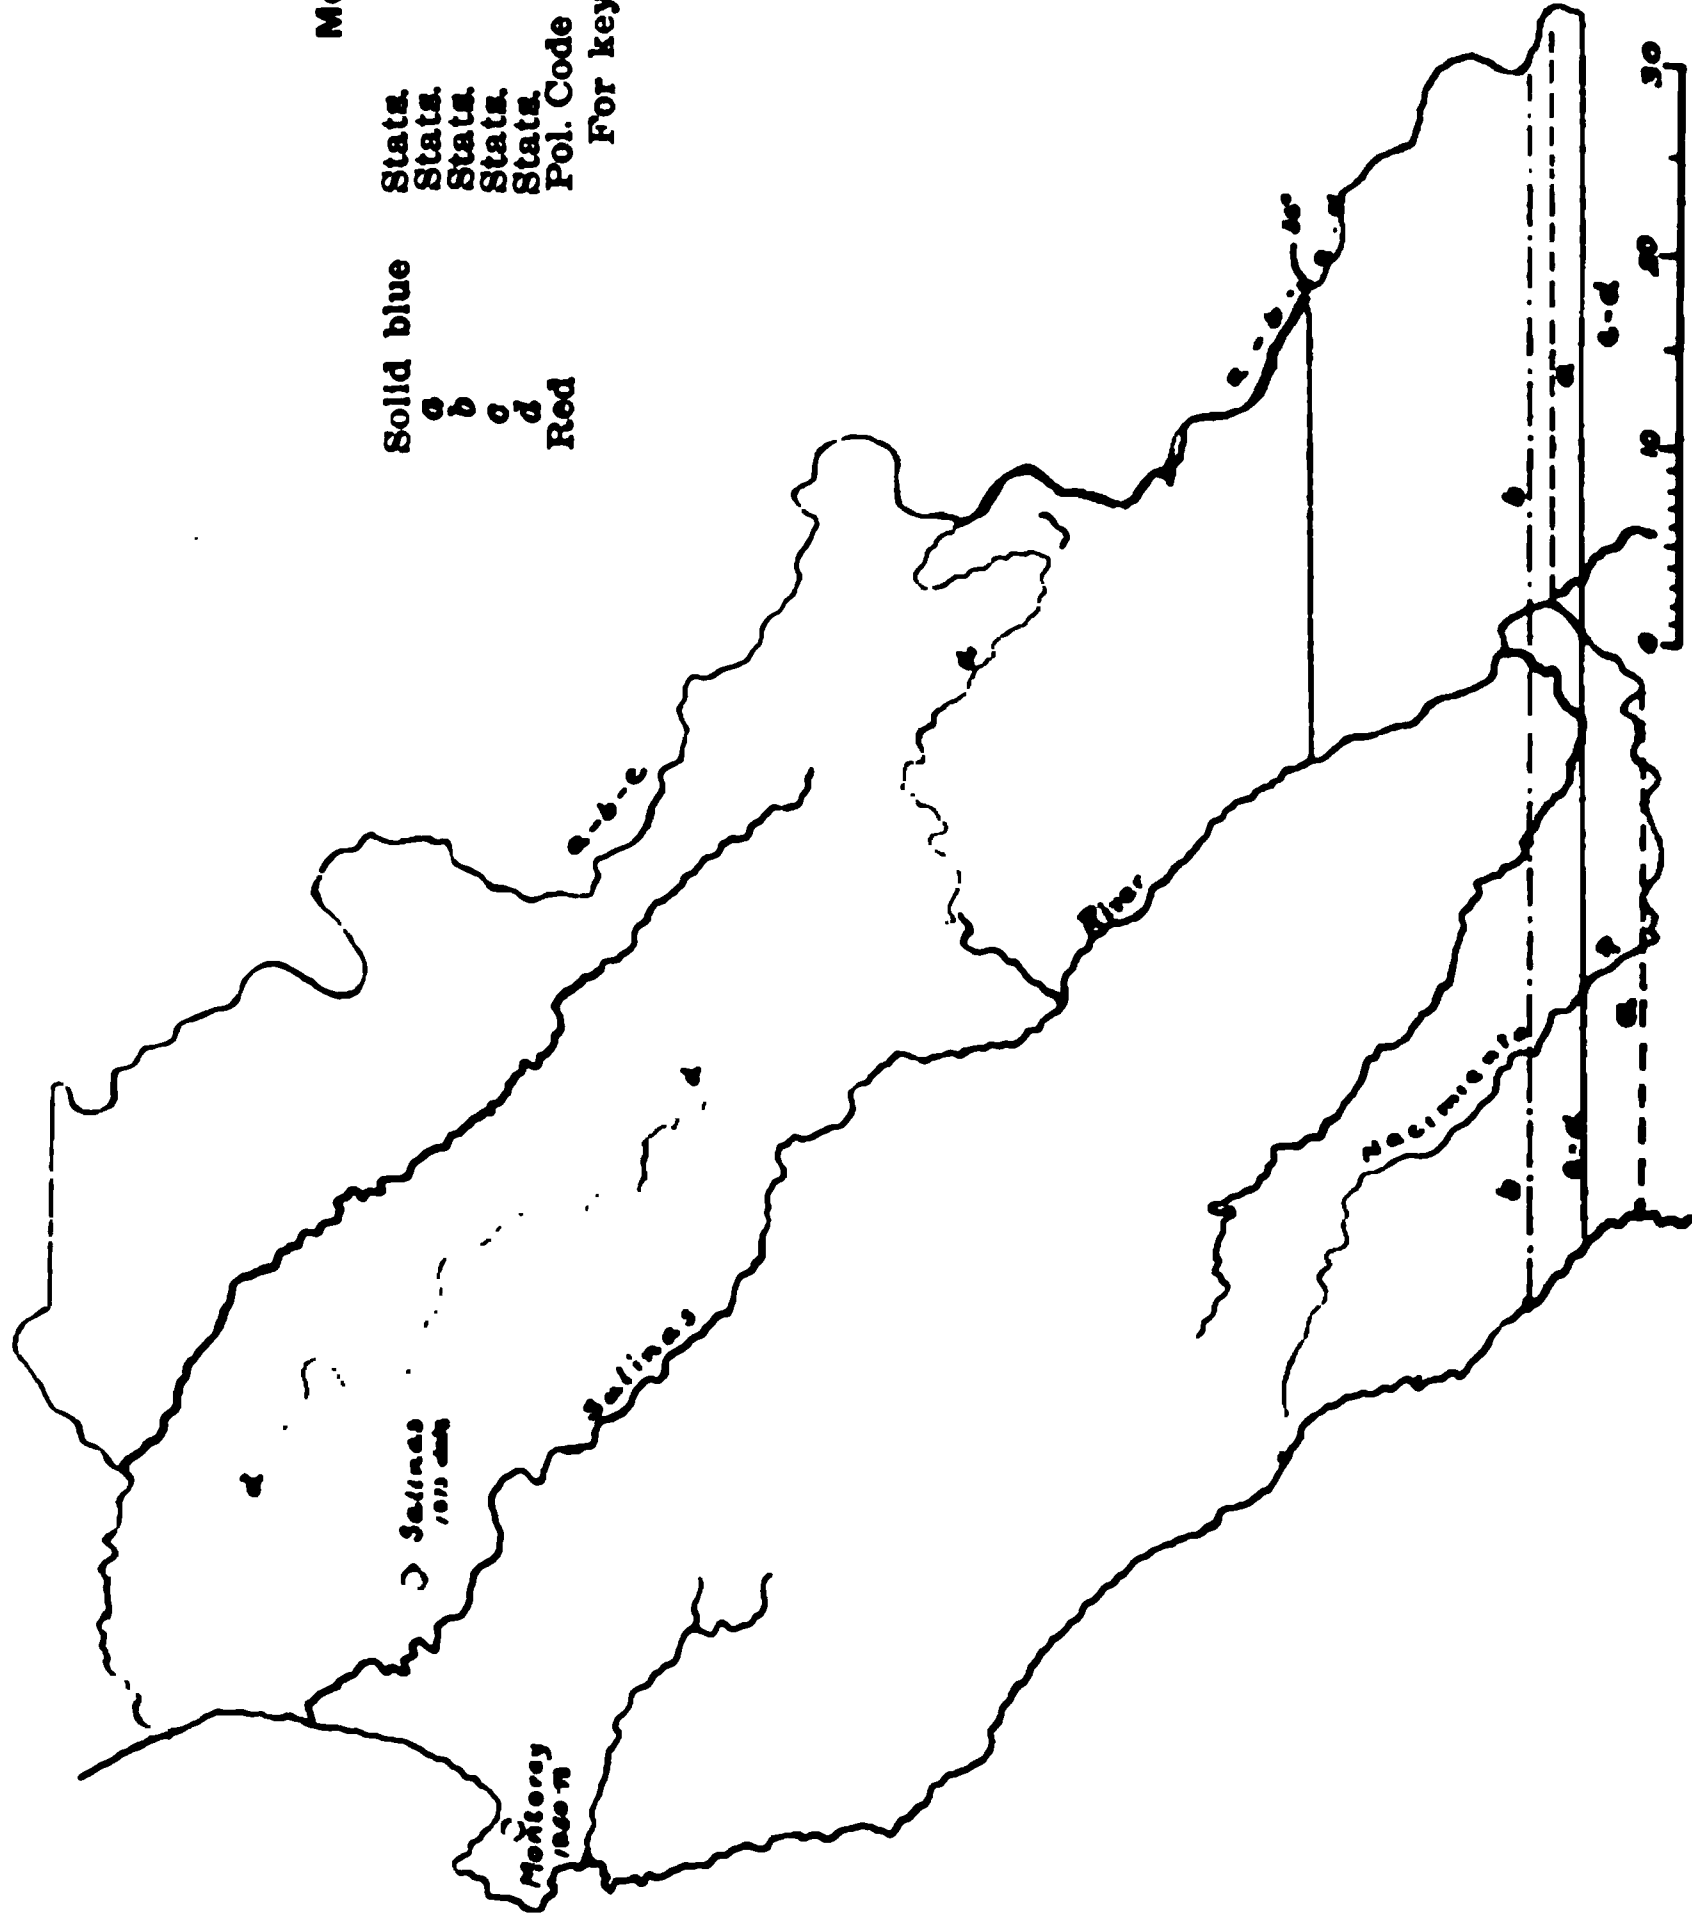

After the removal to Salinas the county offices were housed for some time in a two-story wooden house purchased by the Supervisors. In January, 1877, this building was burned, with the result that some of the records were also destroyed. In 1879 the present courthouse was completed. Constructed of stone and brick, with heavy metal-covered doors separating each of the offices, it is considered fireproof. There is, however, much wood used in the staircases, supports to the roof, and interior finishing, and it is a question whether the building could stand a severe test from fire should it once gain headway. It stands in the center of a city block, the only structure near at hand being the county jail, a building of red and grey granite. The danger from outside fires, therefore, is slight. The building is lighted by electricity and heated by steam. Many of the older records are stored either in the attic or basement. The latter is more of a cellar than a suitable depository for public records, and much was found in it which showed the bad effects of dampness. These archives were examined during December, 1915.

PRE-STATEHOOD RECORDS, 1781-1850¹

Archives of Monterey County, 1781-1850, 16 v. (1-16); Index, 1 v.

These documents are nearly all in Spanish. Vols. I-V are Criminal Records, 1807-1849; the others miscellaneous. They are the original papers which were held by the U. S. Surveyor-General until 1858 and bound by him. They include official correspondence of the Spanish officials, private letters of important men, public addresses and petty court papers. An index to vols. 6-16 helps to make the documents more accessible. They are more or less worn.

NAPA COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Napa County is one of the original counties of California. Before 1852 it is impossible to mark the boundaries of the county with any certainty, especially at the north and east, the Clear Lake region being claimed by both Napa and Mendocino counties. Acts passed in 1852 and 1855 established this boundary. There have been a number of other changes in the boundary lines, but only two which have resulted in very large territorial gains or losses. In 1861 Lake County was formed from the northern half of Napa; and in 1872 a considerable area around Knoxville was cut off from Lake and added to Napa County. The city of Napa has been the county seat ever since the organization of the county in 1850.

The county has had three courthouses. The first was a two-story frame building erected in 1850. It is said to have been brought from the east around Cape Horn. The second courthouse was built in 1856 at a cost of about $3,000. It was of brick, two stories in height and served the county's needs until 1878. In the latter year the present building was begun and was completed in 1879. The original cost was about $51,000. The walls are of brick, but there is much wood in the interior walls and finish. While reasonably safe from outside fires, it is far from fireproof within. This danger to the records is, however, considerably minimized by reason of the fact that the greater part of them are kept in vaults, both the Clerk's and Recorder's offices being provided with fair-sized vaults. The Treasurer has two small vaults, one of which, containing the older records of the office, is probably the safest storage place in the building. On the second floor is a storeroom, called the "Exhibit Room," in which are stored a number of the older records. A few are also found in the belfry. Steam heat and electric lights are used throughout. The bookshelves and filing cases in the Clerk's and Recorder's offices are of metal of the usual type. The offices of Auditor and Recorder are combined.

At the present time a modern, reinforced concrete Hall of Records is nearing completion. The occupation of this building will relieve the present congestion in the courthouse and permit the Clerk to keep all of his records in vaults.

These archives were examined in May, 1917.

NEVADA COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Nevada County was created in 1851 from territory that was originally a part of Yuba County. In 1852 a strip was added along the north, and in 1856 a further addition was made, including the territory in the bend of the Middle Yuba River. Nevada City has been the county seat continuously since the creation of the county.

From 1851 to 1856 the county offices were housed in wooden buildings rented for the purpose by the county. In July, 1856, the first courthouse was completed at a cost of $50,000. Scarcely had the building been occupied when it was destroyed, in the great fire which devastated Nevada City in that year. All of the county records were lost. The courthouse was rebuilt, but in 1863 was again burned out in the general conflagration of November 8th. This time practically all of the records were saved. The courthouse was again rebuilt, at a cost of nearly $50,000, being completed early in 1865. In 1900 extensive alterations were made in the old building and an addition built, the improvements costing about $35,000.

The building is of brick and stone, with metal doors and fittings. The interior finish and arrangement is designed to make it fireproof. There is, however, quite an extensive wooden addition on the rear, a part of which is used for the storing of a quantity of the older records. Aside from this wooden addition, there is little danger from exterior fires. There is a small vault in the Treasurer's office, and another somewhat larger, in the Clerk-Auditor's office. In the latter vault are kept a large part of the early assessment rolls and the election returns. The fixtures in the various offices are in general modern and convenient. Steam heat and electric lights are used throughout.

In 1877 the county purchased a lot and brick building in Broad street, and this building was used as the Treasurer's office until after the alteration of the courthouse in 1900. At other times prior to 1877 the Treasurer's office seems to have been located in buildings outside the courthouse. As a consequence all the earlier records of the Treasurer's office are missing. This report is based upon an examination made during July, 1917.

ORANGE COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Orange County was created in 1889, from territory which previously had been a part of Los Angeles County. Since its organization there have been no important changes in its boundaries. The county seat has remained at Santa Ana.

Previous to 1900 the county officers were housed in temporary offices in the business district. In 1900 the present courthouse was occupied. With the exception of the jail, no other building stands upon the same block. It is built of stone and cement with a tile roof, but much wood is used in its interior construction, especially about the roof and attic. It is probably safe from exterior fires, but can not be classed as entirely fireproof from within. The building is not equipped with vaults. The office equipment is, in general, modern and efficient. Electric lights and furnace heat are employed. The older records, not in current use, are stored in the basement and attic.

These archives were examined in August, 1916.

PLACER COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Placer County was organized April 25, 1851, from territory which had previously been parts of Sutter and Yuba counties. Since the date of its formation the territory has been practically the same, and the county seat has always remained at Auburn.

The first courthouse was a wooden structure built in 1854, but was soon supplanted by a brick building erected near at hand, the upper stories of the two buildings being connected by a bridge. The present courthouse was first occupied in 1898. It stands alone from other buildings and, with the exception of the dome, is built of brick and stone and may be considered reasonably safe from outside fires. Much wood is used for the interior finish in doors, desks, counters and other furniture. The building is lighted by electricity and heated by steam.

Vaults are not used for the record books. The filing cases and book shelves are of metal, but the latter are open and therefore accumulate dust. This examination was made during July, 1916.

PLUMAS COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Plumas County was created March 18, 1854, from territory which had previously been a portion of Butte County. The only important change in boundaries was made in 1864 when a portion of the county was detached to form the southern part of Lassen County.

From the time of the organization of the county the seat of justice has been at Quincy, formerly known as American Ranch. The building which is still used as a courthouse was erected at that time. In 1895 a Hall of Records and a jail were also constructed. The latter are built of brick, but the former is a wooden building and, being heated by stoves, is constantly in danger from fire. Steam is used for heat in the newer building, and all are lighted by electricity. The offices of the Clerk, Auditor, Recorder and Treasurer are located in the Hall of Records; the others are in the courthouse. In general, the office equipment is modern and convenient, the Assessor's office being especially well furnished.

About 1910 the Supervisors ordered the older records, then kept in the attic of the courthouse, to be examined and the "worthless" ones disposed of. Much material was destroyed in this manner, but fortunately J. D. McLaughlin, a local attorney, took occasion at this time to preserve many of these discarded records for his private collection. Since they serve to supplement the records in the archives they have been reported as a whole in this report.

The examination of these archives was made in July, 1916.

RIVERSIDE COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Riverside is one of the more recent of the counties of the state, having been formed in 1893 out of territory taken from San Diego and San Bernardino counties, 6,044 square miles from the former and 590 from the latter. A slight change in the northern boundary was made in 1919. The county seat has always been at Riverside.

For the first ten years the county offices were located in the old Arlington Hotel, but in 1903 the present courthouse was occupied. It, together with the jail, occupies a whole block and is constructed of steel and concrete. It may, therefore, be considered fireproof, although some wood is used in the interior furnishings. Vaults are not generally used, except by the Treasurer. The building is lighted by electricity and is equipped with a furnace. This courthouse was examined in July, 1916.

SACRAMENTO COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Sacramento was one of the original counties into which the state was divided in 1850. Since its organization there have been no important modifications in its boundaries, the only changes having been along the Sacramento and Mokelumne rivers where the shifting of the channels made a redefinition of boundaries desirable. The city of Sacramento has always been the seat of the county government. In 1858 the city and county governments were consolidated, and continued to be so administered until 1863.

The first courthouse, built in 1850 and 1851, was destroyed by fire in 1854. In the following year a much larger building was completed, built of brick at a cost of $240,000. This was used as a state capital from 1855 until 1869, and during that period the county officials occupied offices in other buildings in the city. In 1882 a Hall of Records was completed and occupied. These two buildings were torn down to make room for the present courthouse, which was completed in 1913. This building is one of the finest county buildings in the state. It is constructed of concrete and steel and is well equipped for the safe and convenient handling of the county's business.

Besides the main offices, which are located on the first and second floors, the Clerk has a large basement in which are stored a large quantity of the older records. Room 29 in the basement is used partly as an office and partly for the storing of a quantity of old books from the Auditor's office and a smaller number from several other offices. At the time of this examination a number of the older records of the Treasurer were stored in a small room on the fourth floor.

At the present time the county records are safely housed, but in the past, at various times and for considerable periods, some of the officials and records have been located in private business houses in the city. As might be expected, this has resulted in some loss and some damage, but the loss and damage have not been so great as might be supposed. The important records are today complete and in an excellent state of preservation.

The archives of the county were examined in March, 1917.

SAN BENITO COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

San Benito County was formed in 1874 from territory cut off from Monterey County. To the original county there was added in 1887 small sections of territory detached from Fresno and Merced counties. The county seat has from the first been located at Hollister, which is the only town of considerable size in the county.

The first courthouse was a modest structure remodeled from a building on the present courthouse site. This first courthouse was sold in 1888 for the sum of $400. The present courthouse, a substantial brick structure, was occupied in the same year. The Hall of Records, a beautiful and well appointed building of steel and concrete, was completed in 1911. These buildings are both well cared for and present a handsome appearance. The Hall of Records is as near fireproof as such a building can be made, as no wood was used in the construction of the building itself and there is practically none in its furnishings. The courthouse proper, with which the Hall of Records is connected by an enclosed corridor, is not so safe as the latter building, but will probably rank above the average in point of safety. Electric lights and steam heat are used.

All of the offices have sufficient room for the present records, and a large basement under the Hall of Records provides a safe place for the storage of the older records as their current usefulness expires. The county being comparatively young, the quantity of records is not large. The officials are in general efficient and careful. The offices of Clerk, Auditor and Recorder are combined, as are also those of Tax Collector and Sheriff. These archives were examined in December, 1916.

SAN BERNARDINO COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

San Bernardino County was formed in 1853 from territory which had belonged to Los Angeles and San Diego counties. Two more or less important changes have subsequently been made in its boundaries: the first in 1872, when all the territory of the county lying north of the sixth standard was given to Inyo County; the other in 1893, when some 590 square miles were given to the newly organized Riverside County. A portion of the western boundary as surveyed in 1878 did not follow the description given in the statutes or code, hence it was open to dispute. By an act passed in 1917 the line between Kern and San Bernardino was modified. In 1919 an amendment to the Political Code redefined the boundaries in full making a slight change in the Los Angeles-San Bernardino boundary and also in the Riverside-San Bernardino line. Since the beginning San Bernardino has been the county seat.

The present courthouse was first occupied about 1873. It is a wooden building and is equipped largely with wooden furniture and heated by wood stoves. It is, therefore, constantly in danger from fire. Fortunately, however, most of the offices are located in two additions which have been constructed in recent years: a Hall of Records in 1890, and an addition to the courthouse in 1892. These are of stone and cement and may be considered fireproof, but are greatly endangered by the older wooden building, as well as by private buildings which are not far removed. Vaults are not used to any great extent. The offices are much overcrowded, so that old records are frequently sent to the basement or to the bonfire.

These archives were examined in July, 1916.

SAN DIEGO COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

San Diego County was one of the original counties created by the statute of February 18, 1850. Since the organization of the county its area has been cut down by subsequent legislation to a small proportion of its original size. The first of these changes was made by the act of 1851, when territory including approximately the present San Bernardino County was transferred to Los Angeles County; in 1893 Riverside County was detached, and in 1907 Imperial County was formed from the eastern part of the county. From the beginning, the city of San Diego has been the county seat.

The present courthouse dates from 1887. At that time, however, only a portion of the present structure was erected, many subsequent additions having been made. It is constructed largely of stone and concrete and would probably be safe from outside fire, as the county buildings, including the jail, stand on a block by themselves. Whether or not the records can be considered safe from a fire originating within the buildings is not so well established. Vaults are not extensively used for the archives of the offices. In general the office equipment is modern and convenient. Heat is supplied from a furnace and the lighting is by electricity. Many semi-discarded volumes and documents were found in the basement, one portion of which is used by the Auditor, another by the Clerk and other officers. These archives were examined in November, 1916.

PRE-STATEHOOD RECORDS¹

Deeds, 1848-1855, 5 v. (A-E).

This set may more properly be referred to as books of record than as deeds for they contain not only deeds but also all other documents recorded by the Alcalde and Recorder.

Deeds, 1848-1855, 2 v. (O, OO).

These are copies of the five volumes above listed. Vol. O includes the entries in vols. A-C and vol. OO those for the two vols. D-E. There is also a second copy of vol. OO. In neither of these volumes, however, do the closing entries agree with vol. E, nor do they agree with each other.

Wills, 1848-1850, 1 v.

The title "Wills" appears inside the book. The first entry is the will of Joseph Snook, recorded by Alcalde Brown, Apr. 4, 1848. This is followed by several documents in Spanish. On page 6, J. H. Bean, Alcalde and Acting Judge of First Instance, authorizes the Registrar to record in this book all deeds, brands, mortgages, etc.

CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO

INTRODUCTION

San Francisco was one of the original counties created in 1850. Before the separation of San Mateo County in 1856 its territory reached as far south as Santa Clara and Santa Cruz counties, the boundary running up San Francisquito Creek to its source and thence west to the ocean. It, therefore, included approximately three-fourths of the present San Mateo County. The boundaries have been changed or redefined several times, but since 1856 the changes have not been of much significance, except as they applied to the waters of the bay.

On July 1, 1856, the city and county governments were consolidated. By reason of this action the government of the City and County of San Francisco is unlike any other county or municipal government in the state. In the effect upon the archives the difference is not so marked as might be supposed. This is shown in the report which follows, which is in general similar to the report on other counties. As will be seen by consulting the report, not all of the archives of the government of San Francisco were examined, some of those of a distinctly municipal nature being omitted. All the distinctly county archives were, however, examined and appear in this report.

On account of the large population and the peculiar form of government of San Francisco, the duties of some of the officials vary from the usual routine. The work of the Clerk, for instance, does not coincide at all points with the work of that official in the other counties, the records of the Board of Supervisors, and the Registrar not being under his jurisdiction. These two officers are therefore reported independently.

The records of the County Clerk are to be found in three separate buildings. The records of the civil departments of the Superior Court and the miscellaneous records are located in the office of the Clerk on the third floor of the city hall; the records of the criminal departments of the Superior Court and the file of coroner's inquests are in the Hall of Justice at the corner of Kearney and Washington streets; while the records of the Juvenile Court are to be found in the Juvenile Detention Home, at 150 Otis street. In this report the records of the civil and criminal departments of the Superior Court are listed separately, this arrangement being considered advisable in view of the actual separation of the records at the city hall and the Hall of Justice.

The great bulk of the records were destroyed in the fire of April, 1906. All of the records of the Clerk and Board of Supervisors were destroyed except a few bonds and wills. In the Recorder's office some deed books and a few other records were saved. Fortunately, many of the older records of the period before 1850 were saved. These are listed below as pre-statehood records. In the Treasurer's basement are also to be found a large collection of old records dating from 1850. In the absence of court and supervisors' records these constitute a very valuable source of information. Many records for the period preceding the fire are also to be found in the Auditor's basement.

Most of the archives are housed in the new city hall located at the Civic Center. This is a beautiful fireproof building and well adapted to the present needs of the city. The examination of the Recorder's archives was made in November, 1916; that of the other offices during the spring of 1917.

PRE-STATEHOOD RECORDS¹

"Spanish Records, Liber 1," 1838-1851, 1 v.

The entries are in Spanish. The dates are the dates of the documents and not the dates of recording in the book. The earliest is Nov. 26, 1838, and the last, Oct. 23, 1851. The book was probably first used about 1850, but there is no clear proof of that. On page 3 the endorsement of County Recorder John A. McGlynn appears stating that the foregoing document was recorded Aug. 28, 1850. The volume contains 260 pages, 9 x 15 inches, of which only pages 1-44 are used. It is indexed. A copy and translation are given in "Spanish Records—Translation," etc., pp. 243-302.

"Spanish Blotter, B," 1839-1846, 1 v.; 4 photographic copies, 1 v. each.

A record in Spanish dealing with lots in and about Yerba Buena from May 15, 1839, to August, 1846. The original consists of 17 pages 8½ x 13 inches, badly worn. To prevent further wear it has been tied in a canvas-board cover and properly labeled. The photographic copies were made in November, 1867, by order of the Supervisors and are each properly certified to by the Recorder. Although faded they are easily legible and are better to use than the original. For a copy with translation see "Spanish Record, B," listed below, and "Spanish Records—Translation," etc., pp. 303-325; for copy see "Official notes—Spanish Blotter, B," etc., pp. 75-88.

"Spanish Record, B," 1 v.

The title here is misleading as the book contains a copy and translation of "Spanish Blotter, B," the copy and translation having been made Dec. 10, 1849. The whole volume comprises 566 pages, of which only 32 are used. This must not be confused with "Spanish Records, B," 1847-1850, listed below.

"Blotter of Official Notes, etc., of Francisco Guerrero, while Alcalde at different times. 1839, 1840, 1841, 1842, 1843."

The dates range from May 15, 1839, to Oct. 5, 1843. It is a book of 64 pages, 8½ x 12 inches, bound in a pasteboard cover, but now tied in a canvas-leather binder. The records are entered in Spanish. For a copy of this see below, "Official Notes, Spanish Blotter," etc., pp. 1-78.

“Original Grants, A,” 1839–1847, 1 v.; copy, 1 v.

The original is a volume of 367 pages. The first page is missing and the first date, therefore, is Dec. 9, 1839, rather than Nov. 12, 1839, as in the copy. The last date is April 30, 1847. The inside title is “Land Records or titles to lots in the Town of Yerba Buena—San Francisco,” only the latter half of this appears on page 2 of the original. The earlier entries are in Spanish, the later ones in English. The first 86 pages are indexed. The copy was made under authority of a resolution of the Board of Supervisors March 10, 1863, and contains 368 pages, 9½ x 15 inches. The grants originally recorded in Spanish are copied and translated in “Spanish Records—Translation,” pp. 125–240.

The title given here is the one on the outside of the document and is a translation of the original Spanish title which appears at the beginning of the document. This record is in Spanish, 10 pages, 8 x 12 inches, and is tied in a canvas-board cover with “Miscellaneous Transfer Deeds & District Deeds, Book B, ‘OK’,” this latter title being on the cover. A copy of this document may be found in “Official Notes—Spanish Blotter B,” etc., pp. 121–126.

“Book A, Transfer Deeds,” May 6, 1845–May 18, 1846.

No original or separate volume for this record has been preserved, some of the entries, however, may be original. The dates are those of the documents entered, not the date of entry, as the last was recorded Dec. 27, 1853. The entries occupy pages 326–371 in “Spanish Records—Translations,” etc., and must not be confused with “Transfer Deeds, Liber A,” listed below.

“Spanish Records, Liber A,” July 29, 1846–Jan. 14, 1850, 1 v.

This is a book of about 450 pages, 7½ x 13 inches, only 70 of which are used. The entries are in Spanish and pertain to land titles. A copy of pp. 1–57 of this record is given in another volume having the same title. A copy and translation of the entire record may be found in “Spanish Records—Translation,” etc., pp. 1–86.

Thirty-three pages used out of about 250, 8 x 13 inches.

Montgomery was granted to the town of San Francisco. Some of the entries are signed by Hyde, others are unsigned. Marginal notes indicate where the entries have been recorded in other books. The copy has the same title as the original and is a book of 182 pages, 9 x 15 inches. An unsigned certificate on page 182 shows it to have been made under the authority of a resolution of the Board of Supervisors passed March 10, 1863.

This is a paper-covered book of 63 pages, 7½ x 12 inches, tied in a canvas-board cover with the outside label as above. It is an original record of Alcalde Leavenworth. On pages 1–8, 10–11 are copied most, but not all of the entries of pages 1–11 of “Miscellaneous Transfer Deeds,” etc., of which it is a continuation. The signatures of Alcalde Hyde are not copied and some errors were noticed.

A volume of 102 pages, 11 x 17 inches, 63 pages being used in the record. This is an exact copy of “Blotter B, District Record,” listed above. The following note appears on the first page, which is missing from “Blotter B,” etc.:

T M LEAVENWORTH,

July, 1849.

First Alcalde Dist. of San Francisco.

“This Blotter has been partially copied by a careless clerk having omissions of some certificates.

“T. M. LEAVENWORTH.”

A volume of about 250 pages, 9 x 14½ inches, of which 75 are used. The entries in this book are copied from “Miscellaneous Transfer Deeds & District Deeds, Book B, OK,” and “Blotter B, District Record,” with some additional entries. Pages 1–11 are the same as pages 1–11 of “Miscellaneous Transfer Deeds,” etc., with the addition of a certificate by Alcalde Leavenworth on page 8. All the valid entries in “Blotter B, District Record,” are copied into this volume. This record is copied in full in “Dist. Record, B,” listed below.

“Official Notes; Spanish Blotter, B; Transfer Deeds; Investigation; Index A. B. C.; Release Deeds.”

This is a book containing copies of older records; 229 pages, 11½ x 17 inches. They are in good penmanship, but neither certified nor translated. K.’”; pp. 138–229, “Index to Books A. B. and C. of Transfer Deeds, 1846, 1847, 1848, 1849.”

The original is a book of 217 pages, 7 x 15 inches, and contains in the back 1½ pages of “Notes on California,” giving an incompleated account of the trip from Callao to Monterey and thence northward via San Jose. The handwriting is that of Geo. Hyde, First Alcalde, by whom many of the entries in the book were made. The dates correspond with his arrival in California, hence these are doubtless notes made by him. One of the copies, labeled “Records,” is a book of 331 pages, 8 x 14 inches, of which 216 pages are used; and the other a book of 500 pages, 9 x 15 inches, of which only pages 1–217 are used.

“C, Land Titles,” Sept. 18, 1848–April 6, 1849, 1 v.

“Here the Hounds entered the Alcaldes office and seized the Records
A Patterson & others entering a [— — —?] Tally ho”

Alcalde.”

The three words before “Tally ho” were carelessly formed, the last one being entirely illegible.

This is a very interesting record and is not confined to San Francisco, for many entries concern land along the rivers near the gold fields.

“Mis., 1849,” May 5–Dec. 6, 1849, 1 v.

A book of 290 pages, 9 x 15 inches, of which only 36 double pages are used. The records are mortgages, probate petitions and orders: appraisement of W. A. Leidesdorff's Estate, bonds, etc.

“Sat. Mort, A,” Oct. 8, 1849–Jan. 24, 1852, 1 v.

A volume of satisfactions of mortgages, 293 pages, 8 x 12½ inches, indexed.

“Alcalde Deeds, 100 vara lots,” November–December, 1849, 1 v.

This volume is a form book, the original deed forms being bound into a volume 7½ x 9 inches. The entries cover lots 171–305, which were sold during November and December, 1849. A copy of these deeds is given in “Certified Grants, I,” listed below.

“Alcalde Deeds, 50 vara lots,” November–December, 1849, 2 v.

These volumes are form books similar to the one just described. The first volume includes the certificates for lots 429–1195, the second 1196–1439. The lots were placed on sale during November and December, 1849. A copy of these may be found in “Certified Grants, II–III,” listed below.

“Certified Grants,” 5 v. (1-5).

In accordance with a resolution of the town council of San Francisco, March 26, 1850, the Alcalde was “authorized to purchase proper books for recording all the deeds and grants and other documents now recorded in copy books, and other small books, now deposited in his office.” These were to be transcribed and certified to by the Alcalde. The contents of the volumes are as follows: Vol. 1, Title to 100-vara lots Nos. 1-305; Vols. 2-3, Title to 50-vara lots Nos. 9-699, 700-1439; Vols. 4-5, Title to water lots Nos. 1-399, 400-771.

“Mission Book, Ledger,” Jan. 5-Sept. 27, 1850, 1 v.

A volume of 400 pages, 9 x 15 inches, only 150 of which are used. This book is in reality a record of pre-emption (squatter's) claims together with a copy of the papers in each case. There is usually, as in the case of entry one, a petition to Horace Hawes, Prefect of the District of San Francisco, for a piece of vacant land near Dolores; this is referred first to Guerrero, sub prefect, to know if the land is vacant, etc.; then to F. P. Tracy, Justice of the Peace for the Mission Dolores, who, in case there is no opposing title, is ordered to make the grant, if the petitioner is a citizen of the United States; the grant is made by Tracy, including “legal and perpetual possession and enjoyment thereof, subject to the establishment of any prior claim, and to the action of the United States government.”

SAN JOAQUIN COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

San Joaquin was one of the original counties into which the state was divided in 1850, and still has practically the same territory, with the exception of a portion near Knights Ferry, which was added to Stanislaus County in 1860. Since the beginning of the county, Stockton has been the seat of justice.

The present courthouse is a beautiful building standing in the center of one of the central city blocks. It was erected in 1890. Its position, surrounded on all sides by wide streets, and the exterior finish of stone, render it practically safe from fire without. The interior, however, can not be considered fireproof. Much wood has been used in the walls and supports, as well as in the interior furnishings.

The equipment of the offices varies from wooden counters, bookcases and filing cabinets to the more modern steel furniture. Most of the offices are provided with vaults, but probably less than one-fourth of the records are kept within them.

Many of the older records are stored away in the attic at the base of the dome. This is entirely dry, but the books and papers are covered with much dust and are in danger of being badly scattered by careless handling. The presence of rats in former times is evident, and there is constant danger of fire, since the darker corners are lighted by means of a tallow candle. Much of this material is of considerable value.

The examination of the archives was made in March, 1916.

SAN LUIS OBISPO COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

San Luis Obispo was one of the original counties into which the state was divided in 1850. Its boundaries, both on the north and south, underwent many changes during the years previous to 1872, but none were radical in nature. For the first few years after the formation of the county the records seem to have been kept in a very indifferent manner and an examination of this report will show that very few of the series of record books date from the year 1850. It is probable, however, that very little has been lost, as the later officials gathered up the scattered records and put them in their proper places. Practically all of the records for the first years have been re-copied into books of more permanent character.

San Luis Obispo has been the county seat from the first. The first county offices were in adobe buildings and other similar structures. The present courthouse was completed in 1873 at a cost of about $42,000. It is built of brick and occupies the center of a block well located near the center of town. While it is probably safe from outside fires, the same can not be said as to the fire risk from the interior. Electric lights are used. The method of heating, by means of wood stoves, constitutes a distinct menace to the records. The first or basement floor is used for a jail and this fact adds to the danger. The Clerk has a large vault, so-called, in which the greater part of the court records are kept. The Auditor, Treasurer and Tax Collector have each a small vault in which a few of their books are kept. The janitor's storeroom is used for the storing of some records, most of which are not of great value. At the suggestion of the commission a small part of these were removed by the Clerk and placed in the vault. Wooden cupboards, built in, adjoining the office of the Superintendent of Schools, are used for storage purposes, as is also a part of a wooden shed in one corner of the courthouse square. The Hall of Records, occupying one corner of the square, was built in 1888. It is a small but solidly built structure of brick, much safer from fire than the courthouse. But here also the heating is done with a wood stove.

Except in the Assessor's office, the book shelves and filing cases are for the most part of metal. There is much dust in evidence among the older and semi-discarded records, partly due, no doubt, to the fact that prisoners from the county jail do a considerable amount of the janitor work. The archives of this county were examined in January, 1917.

SAN MATEO COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

The county of San Mateo was formed by a subdivision of San Francisco County in 1856. In 1868 an addition was made by the annexation of a portion of territory which had formerly belonged to Santa Cruz County. The county seat was originally located at Belmont, but the same year was transferred to Redwood City. At an election held in 1874 San Mateo was chosen as county seat, but through arbitration its removal from Redwood City was prevented.

The present courthouse is, for its size, one of the best in the state, having been built in 1908. It stands alone upon a block in the center of the city and is built of stone and concrete. If care is taken to close the steel shutters it should be safe from outside fires, while the interior construction also appears to be fireproof. The records of the Clerk and Recorder are kept in large rooms which, when closed, are in reality fire and burglar-proof vaults. The building is heated by steam and lighted by electricity. The office equipment is throughout modern and convenient, although not dustproof.

The archives of this county were examined in October, 1917.

SANTA BARBARA COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Santa Barbara County was created in April, 1850, and before January 1, 1873, included also that territory which now comprises Ventura County. During the early years the boundaries were shifted many times, but none of the changes were radical in nature, being merely attempts to arrive at a more satisfactory line. The city of Santa Barbara has been the county seat since the beginning of the county. The present buildings occupy the center of a block. The main structure was erected in 1872, and additions have been made from time to time. The present quarters are very crowded, making necessary the storing of considerable quantities of valuable records in basement and attic storerooms, where they are subject to deterioration from moisture, dust, mice, etc.

The buildings are of brick, stone, and wood, and are far from being fireproof. The Recorder's vault is probably fireproof, and it is large enough to contain the more important county records. It is provided with modern fire and dustproof fixtures, conveniently arranged for use by the public. The records both of Recorder and Clerk have been typewritten since 1903, and a loose leaf system has been in use most of that time. All the records are kept on a very heavy ledger paper.

The Clerk's vault is provided with fireproof fixtures for its books and recent files, but the older records are mostly in wooden files on the second floor of the vault. Only the books in current use are kept outside of the vault in the main office. While the Recorder's offices and vault are in a separate building, the Clerk's quarters are part of the original courthouse and hence are subject to damage from fires originating there. The Auditor and Tax Collector are each provided with a small vault. The buildings are heated by a crude oil furnace and lighted by electricity.

For miscellaneous records not in current use, the officials have had to resort to basement and attic storerooms. The former, though fairly fireproof, is far from moisture-proof. Their heavy barred iron doors give witness to their use in early days as a place of safe-keeping for prisoners. The attic storeroom is entirely unfit for use as a storeroom of any sort; it is neither fire, dust, nor rat proof. Fortunately, this room is not extensively used.

These archives were examined in June, 1916.

SANTA CLARA COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Santa Clara is one of the counties created by the original division of the state in 1850. The only important change in boundary was made in 1853 when Washington township was detached to form part of Alameda County, although there have been other minor changes for the purpose of rectifying and defining the boundaries. San Jose has been the county seat from the first.

It is impossible, without rather extensive research, to give a complete account of the public buildings prior to 1868, but the following facts may be noted: The first courthouse was built in 1850 or 1851 on First Street, a two-story building, adobe below and frame above. In 1851 the county procured the use of the Bella Union on Santa Clara Street as a courthouse. Prior to 1853 the State House was used by the county for some time, and after that date an adobe building on Lightstone Alley. A short time later in the same year the "What Cheer House" at Second and San Fernando, was purchased for a courthouse. A county jail was built in 1855. In 1860 the county rented the upper part of the City Hall as a courthouse.

The present county buildings occupy the north half of the block bounded by Market and First, St. John and St. James streets, and consist of the following: the courthouse, of brick and stone, completed in 1868; county jail, in rear of courthouse, of brick and steel, built about 1870; Hall of Records, of brick and stone, completed in 1893, and closely connected with the courthouse by corridors; Hall of Justice, of brick and steel, completed in 1906, partially destroyed by the earthquake in that year, and reconstructed and finally occupied in 1910. These buildings are reasonably safe from outside fires, but the courthouse and Hall of Records can hardly be considered absolutely fireproof in interior construction. There are several small vaults, but only a small part of the records are kept in them. Two rooms in the basement, one being a vault with combination steel doors, house a quantity of old books and papers, exhibits, election returns, etc., from the Clerk's office, and a few books and papers belonging to the Treasurer. The Tax Collector and Assessor are located in the Hall of Justice; the Supervisors' room and Registration office are in the courthouse; and the remainder of the offices are in the Hall of Records. Steam heat and electric lights are used throughout. The book stacks and fixtures are, for the most part, modern and convenient.

These archives were examined in October, 1916.

SANTA CRUZ COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Santa Cruz was one of the first counties organized in the state. The act creating the county first designated it as Branciforte, but before the end of the session the legislature had changed the name to Santa Cruz. The only change in the territory was made in 1868, when a portion of the county was detached and given to San Mateo. The county seat has always been at Santa Cruz.

The courthouse and Hall of Records stand in the center of the business district of the city, separated only by an alley from adjoining business property. The courthouse is constructed of brick and may be able to withstand fire from without. The Hall of Records is of brick and stone and somewhat more isolated; it is, however, heated by a wood stove so that there is much danger from fire within the building. Electricity is used throughout for lighting purposes. The bookshelves and filing cases are fairly modern and convenient, some of them being of wood, others of steel. These archives were examined in September, 1916.

SHASTA COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Under the act of February 18, 1850, practically all the northern portion of the state, including a portion of the Sacramento valley, was organized under one county—Shasta. It included all the northeastern part of the state, extending westward to the Coast Range of mountains and southward as far as Red Bluff, on the Sacramento River. To its jurisdiction was also added the territory of Trinity County, which included all that part of the state westward from Shasta County. As might be expected, numerous changes have been made in the area of the county. In 1851 Trinity was separately organized; in 1852, Siskiyou was detached, including with it the present Modoc County; in 1856, Shasta contributed to the area of the newly created Tehama County; and in 1864 it was finally reduced to its present area by the creation of Lassen County, which drew heavily from Shasta. Since 1864 no changes have been made.

The county seat was originally placed at Reading's Ranch, but was moved in 1851 to Shasta City, where it remained until 1887, when it was established at Redding, its present location. The courthouse was built in 1889. It is constructed of concrete and may be considered safe from outside fires. It is not fireproof from fires originating within the building. In 1909 the Hall of Records, a fireproof structure, was erected. Steam heat and electric lights are used. In general, the filing equipment and bookshelves are modern and convenient. Many semi-discarded records are well cared for in a vault adjoining the former office of the Clerk, a room now used by the Superior Court. This is referred to in the report as the Clerk's vault.

These archives were examined in June, 1916.

SIERRA COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

That territory now designated as Sierra County was originally a portion of Yuba County. The increase in population during the early fifties, together with the difficulty of communication with Marysville, the county seat, led to the separate organization of Sierra County by an act approved April 16, 1852. Since that time the boundaries have been shifted or redefined some six or eight times, but none of these affected any great portion of territory. Since 1852 the county seat has been at Downieville.

The present courthouse, a wooden structure, is said to have been constructed soon after the organization of the county. It stands among a group of wooden buildings and hence is in no way fireproof. The building is lighted by electricity, but is heated with wood stoves. The building is provided with two brick vaults and these are in general used for the official records. The filing cases and office furniture is largely of wood and somewhat antiquated.

This courthouse was examined in June, 1916.

SISKIYOU COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Siskiyou County was created in 1852 from territory which had previously belonged to Shasta, Trinity and Klamath counties. Since its organization several changes have been made in its territory. The first of these was in 1874, when the eastern portion of the county was detached to form Modoc County. The next year the dissolution of Klamath County was completed and a large part of that county annexed to Siskiyou. In 1887 the line with Del Norte was modified, giving Siskiyou that part of the Klamath River around Clear Creek and Indian Creek. Yreka has always been the county seat.

The older part of the courthouse was erected in 1856. It was built of brick. Two wings of concrete were added in 1896, and a Hall of Records, also concrete, was built in 1909. The latter is a separate building. These buildings may be considered safe from exterior fires, but the old courthouse would not resist fire originating within the building. The Hall of Records appears to be fireproof. The Auditor's office, only, is provided with a vault. Steam and electricity furnish the heat and light. The older records that are considered of little value are piled in the basement of the Hall of Records, not far from the furnace. Among these were records dating from 1852 to 1914, and ranging from legal papers to assessment rolls and original deed books.

This examination was made in June, 1916.

SOLANO COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Solano County was included in the original group of twenty-seven counties into which the state was divided in 1850. While there have been a number of changes in the boundary lines, the amount of territory involved has not been large. The county seat for the first eight years was at Benicia, but in 1858 an election fixed the seat of government at Fairfield, where it has since remained. In 1873-1874 a determined effort was made to change the county seat to Vallejo. This effort met with some temporary success, but Fairfield finally emerged triumphant from the struggle.

The first permanent courthouse was erected in 1859 at a cost of about $25,000. In 1878 a Hall of Records was built, and in 1887 a building was erected, filling the space between the two older buildings and completing what was for more than thirty years Solano County's courthouse. In December, 1911, the present courthouse was completed. This is a fine building of steel, concrete and granite, modern in every respect, and designed with a view to making it both fire and burglar proof. The fixtures of the various offices are in keeping with the general character of the building.

Each of the offices represented in this report has a small storeroom in the basement, in which are kept part of the older records. The contents of these storerooms are for the most part in fair shape, though they are not in all cases properly segregated. These archives were examined during July, 1917.

SONOMA COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Sonoma was one of the original counties created in 1850. As it was first created its area was somewhat smaller than at present, but this was more than offset by the fact that for many years Mendocino County was in reality a part of Sonoma. In 1859 that county was separately organized, and the boundary of Sonoma County established much as it is now. The county seat was originally located at Sonoma, but in 1854 it was removed to Santa Rosa, where it has remained.

During the earthquake of 1906 the courthouse, built about 1886, was badly damaged and the construction of a new one became necessary. There is no indication, however, that any great part of the county records were lost at that time. The present courthouse is one of the best in the state. It is of reinforced concrete and is doubtless entirely fireproof. Vaults are not extensively used for the records, although the Clerk and Recorder are provided with enclosed steel cabinets for books and documents. The building is electrically lighted and is heated by steam.

Many of the older semi-discarded records are kept in the basement in a room which is used for general storage purposes. Some of them were found to be of considerable interest and value. In view of the space available it is unfortunate that these old records are not more carefully preserved. The Commission has called the attention of the proper officials to this matter and the promise has been made that the evil will be remedied.

This courthouse was examined in December, 1917.

PRE-STATEHOOD AND OTHER EARLY RECORDS, 1836-1856¹

“Grants, Sonoma City, A-2,” 1836-1854, 1 v.

This is a record book which seems to have belonged originally to M. G. Vallejo. The first document is a grant made by Vallejo, as director of colonization of the northern frontier, to Salvador Vallejo, dated Jan. 11, 1836. Following this are 2½ pages which seem to be an index or list of grants for the year 1837. There are also two entries for 1842. All are endorsed with Vallejo's rubric. On page 7 appears an entry by “John H. Nash, Chief Justice,” granting to Nathan Coombs certain lots in Sonoma. The date of this grant is March 3, 1847. Similar entries follow to page 85, the last date being April 8, 1854. In the back of the book are two pages in Spanish, probably a private record of Vallejo's. No transcript of this volume was found.

¹These are all in the Recorder's office except as noted. See also note under Probate Orders, in archives of the Clerk.

“Expedientes, 1,” 1841–1844.

A volume composed of twenty Spanish documents dealing with land grants on the “frontera del norte.” The first of these relates to the grant of Saucelito to William Richardson, Oct. 15, 1841. The last pertains to the Napa rancho, and is dated February 8, 1844. The documents are not arranged in strict chronological order, for there are a number dated in 1845 and 1846.

Brands, Register of, 1843–1856, 1 v.

The title on the first page of this book is “Book 1 of Alcaldia Records.” It is devoted mostly to brands, but it also contains other records. The earlier entries are all Spanish. The book is badly worn.

Docket of the Justice’s Court Sonoma, Aug. 5, 1846–April, 1847, 1 v.

This is a small volume of 50 pages 8½ x 12½ inches.¹

“First Book B of Deeds, &c,” 1846–1847.

This title is on the fly-leaf, there is no title on the cover. The first page is headed: “A—Transcript of land claims in the Military District of the post of Sonoma, N. California” with the later addition “Book, ‘A.’ Military land claims.” The first entry is for the land claim of Samuel Kelsey, Aug. 12, 1846, before John H. Nash, J. P.; the last entry (p. 38) is the record of the brand of David Tinkey, dated Dec. 30, 1847.

Alcalde Record, Apr. 27, 1847–September, 1849, 1 v., in the Clerk’s office.

“C, Deeds, C,” 1847–1849, 1 v., indexed.

This is a book of 301 pages containing many kinds of records. The first document recorded is a deed, Mark West to John Lewis, et al., Oct. 11, 1847; the last a brand record dated July 12, 1849. Many of these records are in Spanish. With the exception of the last two documents it has been copied in Liber A of Deeds, Transcribed Records.

“Grants, Sonoma City, A,” 1847–1849; “B,” 1849–1850.

On the inside the title appears, “Juzgada 1° de Sonoma—Libro de Expedientes de Solares. Año de 1844,” while on the first page of entries the title reads “Book A of Alcaldia, Records of Sonoma City Lots.” The first entry is for lot No. 53, granted by L. W. Boggs to Nicolas Carriger, under date of Nov. 3, 1847; the last entry is to lot 365, dated Jan. 12, 1849. This is a book of printed forms. It is much worn but it has been repaired by mounting the worst worn pages on linen. The entries from this book (excepting pages 191–192) have been transcribed into Liber A of Deeds, Transcribed Records, 1–136.

Vol. B is evidently a continuation from A. The first entry is a deed to James Gregson for lot No. 104, June 1, 1849. The last entry is for lot No. 347, granted to John Griffith, Aug. 15, [1849]. On the reverse of the last page, entirely covered in the process of mounting and repairing, is a document dated Jan. 12, 1850. This volume has been copied into Liber A of Deeds, Transcribed Records of Sonoma Co., 137–215.

¹The value of the book may be judged to some extent by the first entry which is here given in full as it appears on the records.

On a careful examination of this cause, it is considered by the Court that the evidence against the deft., has been fully sustained by the testimony. Therefore it is considered by the Court that there be inflicted without delay fifteen lashes by hard switches on his bare back, well laid on, and then be discharged

“Liber A of Deeds, Transcribed Records of Sonoma Co.”

This is one of three volumes into which many of the early records have been transcribed. They are not certified, and the headings of the various component parts are not always adequate. The records transcribed in this volume are as follows: pages 1–136, Grants, Sonoma City, A, entered under the title “Book A of Alcaldia Sonoma City.” The last two pages of the original are omitted. Pages 137–215, Grants, Sonoma City, B, under the heading “Book B.” Pages 216–246, Deeds, B, 1856–1857, under the title “2nd Book B,” only pages 17–74 however being given. Pages 248–450, Deeds, C, 1847–1849, as “Book C.” The last two documents of the original are omitted in the transcript. Pages 451–596, Deeds, D, 1849–1850, as “Book D.” Pages 597–871, Deeds, E, 1850–1853, as “Book E.” At the end of the volume is the endorsement, “H. B. Martin for T. H. Pyatt, Co. Recorder.”

“Liber B of Deeds, Transcribed Records of Sonoma Co.”

A volume similar to Liber A just described. Here the reference to the original records is less explicit than in Liber A. The transcribed documents are as follows: pages 2–287, Deeds, F, 1850–1851; pages 288–527, “Book G” of Mortgages, 1851–1852; pages 528–734, Deeds, H, 1851–1852, as “Book H”; pages 736–970, Powers of Attorney, K., 1851–1856, as “Book No. 1. K.”

Liber C of Deeds, Transcribed Records.

The outside title is “Deeds, Liber C.” It is a full transcript of Deeds, M, 1852–1854.

STANISLAUS COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

On April 5, 1854, an act was approved creating Stanislaus County out of territory which had previously been a part of Tuolumne. To this original area was added, in 1860, the triangular-shaped portion north of the Stanislaus River. This had hitherto been a part of San Joaquin County. In 1866 a modification was made in the southern boundary whereby a considerable portion of the southwestern part of the county was detached from Stanislaus and given to Merced County. At the next session of the legislature this area was restored to Stanislaus County, the earlier boundary being reaffirmed.

The county seat, during the earlier years, was subject to frequent changes, it having been located in four other places before it was established at Modesto in 1872. At the first election Adamsville was selected as county seat. This town had started in 1849, but since it did not yet have many buildings, it is said the first court was held "out of doors under a large tree." Within a few months a second election was called and the county seat moved to Empire City. This place retained the local capital from November, 1854, to 1856, when the honor was passed on to La Grange. In 1862 Knights Ferry was made county seat and so remained until 1872, when it was moved to Modesto.

The present courthouse, which was constructed in 1872, stands alone in the center of a city block. It is built of brick with an outer surface of concrete. The interior supports are of wood. It probably would be safe from outside fires, but the amount of wood in the interior construction and furnishings prevents it being considered fireproof from within. Vaults are provided for the Clerk and Treasurer. The latter official keeps about one-half of his records in the vault, but a very small part of the Clerk's records were kept in the vault. The building is lighted by electricity and heated, for the most part, by steam heat; this, however, was supplemented in the Clerk's office by a wood stove.

The examination was made in March, 1916.

SUTTER COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Sutter was one of the original counties into which the state was divided in 1850. At that time it included the southwestern portion of the later created Placer County and a piece of territory along the west which now belongs to Colusa County. Territorial changes—subtractions or additions—were made in 1851, 1852, 1854, 1856 and 1866, before the boundaries were finally fixed in their present location.

The law creating the county located the county seat at Oro, but that place had no suitable buildings, so the Court of Sessions at its first meeting decreed that the seat of government should be at Nicolaus until proper buildings were available at Oro. Early in 1851 the county seat was moved to Auburn, but in that year Auburn became the county seat of the newly created county of Placer. Vernon then became the seat of government for Sutter County and so continued for about a year, when Nicolaus again obtained the coveted prize and retained it for two years. In the fall of 1854 a contested election seems—the records are very obscure—to have given the county seat to Yuba City for a few months, but later, on a final decision, returned it to Nicolaus. In 1856, however, an election was held, under authorization of the legislature, in which Yuba City was, by a large majority, selected as the seat of government for the county, and it has so continued to the present day.

The first permanent courthouse was erected in 1858 and continued in use until 1871, when it was destroyed by fire. A new and better building was completed in 1872, but this also was almost completely destroyed by fire in 1899. It was rebuilt, however, and is still in use. The building has brick walls, but the floors and much of the interior finish is of wood, and it can not be considered fireproof. All of the offices except those of the Clerk and Auditor-Recorder are in this building. There is also a storeroom in which are stored some of the older records. Besides those listed as in the storeroom, a number of others, found there, were removed to the Hall of Records.

The Hall of Records was completed in 1892. It is constructed of brick and stone, with a concrete floor and iron doors. It consists of a main office, where the records are kept, and two smaller offices on either side of the entrance. The fixtures are of metal and of the type usually found in such buildings.

The courthouse and Hall of Records are well isolated from other buildings, occupying half of a large block, and surrounded on all sides by extensive lawns. Electric lights and wood or coal stoves are used in both buildings. The courthouse is also piped for gas, and this is used for light in the storeroom and for heat in some other parts of the building.

The records of the county were examined in February, 1917.

TEHAMA COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Tehama County was created in 1856 from territory which had previously been parts of Shasta, Colusa and Butte counties. The boundaries were redefined several times before 1859, but only two acts involved much area: one in 1857, when the territory between South Fork of Cottonwood and Beegum creeks was annexed from Shasta County; the other in 1859, when the southeast border was fixed as at present, thus giving back to Butte County a small area northwest of Mud Creek. The county seat was originally at Tehama, but was moved shortly afterward to Red Bluff, where it has since remained.

The courthouse is of three parts. The middle portion, a wooden structure with one vault, was built in 1856. To this a brick and cement addition, which is used by the Clerk and Recorder, was made during the seventies. At the south end is the jail, a new structure of stone and concrete. It is heated by steam and lighted by electricity, but can not be considered fireproof. The one vault is in the Assessor's office. The later records are, for the most part, kept in modern and convenient filing cases and book racks, but the older, semi-discarded material is stored away in boxes in the jail basement. Only one of these boxes was examined. In it were found many valuable old records, as will be indicated in the report. The other boxes are said to contain old warrants, vouchers, and other material of more or less value. The examination was made in June, 1916.

TRINITY COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Trinity County was one of the counties created by act of the first legislature. It, however, was not organized until the next year, 1851, being in the meanwhile attached to Shasta County. Its territory as originally created embraced all that part of northwestern California lying north of the 40th parallel and west of the summit of the coast range; it therefore included the present counties of Trinity, Humboldt, Del Norte and western Siskiyou. Before the time of its organization this original area had been reduced by the creation of Klamath County, which was made to include that portion of Trinity County lying north of a line running due east from the mouth of Mad River. In 1853 the remaining territory was again divided by the formation of Humboldt County from its western portion. After 1853 no important changes were made in the territory of Trinity County, except the reannexation from Klamath County of that portion of the upper Trinity River basin lying north of the Klamath line. The county seat has always been located at Weaverville.

The first courthouse was built upon a hill near the Catholic Church, but was destroyed by fire. The present courthouse is a substantial brick building upon Main Street. On the south it closely joins other buildings, used for store and business purposes, while on the north a narrow street or alley separates it from wooden buildings. Practically all of the county records, excepting those of the Superintendent of Schools, are in the office of the County Clerk, who is also Recorder and Auditor. The Treasurer also occupies a corner of the same office. This room, together with the basement below it, is especially well protected from fires by heavy brick walls, concrete floors, and iron shutters. Danger from fire from without is therefore greatly reduced, notwithstanding the location of the courthouse so near to other buildings. The main building is lighted by electricity and is heated by wood stoves. In view of the fact that a large part of the office furnishings are of wood, this heating method presents a constant danger, for a fire originating within the office itself might be disastrous. The lower floor, or basement, under the Clerk's office, is used as a storeroom for the older records. It is separated from the adjoining parts of the building by heavy walls. Since, however, this part of the building is not provided with electricity, candles are used for lighting purposes. The records contained in this room are listed with those of the main office, excepting two or three boxes of unclassified papers, among which were old court papers of early dates, Auditor's vouchers, etc. The office of the Superintendent of Schools is located in a building used also as a county library. This is a small wooden building closely adjoining other business property on Main Street.

The examination of this courthouse was made in September, 1917.

TULARE COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Tulare County was set off in 1852 from the southern part of Mariposa and the northern part of Los Angeles counties. It has been then greatly reduced in size by the formation of new counties: Fresno in 1856, Kern and Inyo in 1866, and Kings in 1893.

The county seat was originally at Woodsville, 1852-1853. In 1853 it was changed to Visalia, where it has since been. The Board of Supervisors at their first meeting ignored the name "Visalia" ordered the place to be called "Buena Vista." Public sentiment favored the former name in honor of Nathaniel Vise, "the original locator," and the name Buena Vista was soon dropped.

The first courthouse was a log cabin built in 1851 by a man named Woods and in which he is said to have been skinned alive by the Indians. The officers kept their accounts "on scraps of paper or in their pockets" while the "records were deposited in their pockets, or as the inhabitant says, 'Thrown into an open box that stood in the room'." After the removal of the county seat to Visalia, a combination courthouse and jail was built (1853). This was a one-room building 20 feet high with a post in the middle to which prisoners were chained. The building was replaced in 1859 by a brick building 40 by 60 feet, two stories and a basement. This served until 1876, when the present courthouse was built. In 1908 the north and south wings were added. The courthouse occupies one block and is surrounded by streets of average width. Across the streets on all sides except the east are tall buildings that are in no sense fireproof, and the burning of them endanger the courthouse.

The courthouse itself is of stone, steel, cement and wood. It cannot be considered fireproof. Especially is this true of the first floors, stairways, etc., of the older parts. Vaults are used in the offices, but only a small per cent of the records are kept there except in the Auditor's office, whose records are kept in a vault that forms one of the rooms of his office. It is doubtful if this is fireproof, however. The book racks, filing cases, etc., in most of the offices are modern, convenient, and the filing cases dustproof. An exception to this is found in the Supervisors' room in which the old wooden cases formerly used in the Clerk's office are now in use. The building is lighted by electricity and heated by steam, except the jail which has no regular lighting or heating system.

In the attic are stored quite a number of old records, some of which are valuable, though for the most part they are not of very great importance. The damage from dust and occasional handling by attendants or persons looking up old records is very great.

This courthouse was examined during July, 1916.

TUOLUMNE COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Tuolumne was one of the original counties into which the state was divided in 1850. At that time it included also the present county of Stanislaus, which was detached in 1854, reducing Tuolumne to the present boundaries. Sonora has been the county seat during the entire period since the organization of the county.

The first courthouse, built in 1852, was a wooden building and was used until 1898. The present building was occupied in December, 1899. During the period of construction the county officers and records were housed in various buildings in Sonora. The present courthouse is a modern structure of steel, brick and concrete, occupying a block near the center of town. It is safe from outside fires, and probably as nearly fireproof in interior construction as the average public building. It is lighted by electricity and heated with steam heat.

All of the offices included in this report are located on the second floor, except that of the County Superintendent of Schools, which is on the first floor. The offices of Clerk and Auditor are combined. The Superintendent of Schools combines his duties with those of principal of the Jamestown school. The Clerk-Auditor has a large vault in which the greater part of the court records and Auditor's records are kept. The Treasurer also has a small vault in which his current records are kept.

On the first floor is an archive room, or storeroom, in which are stored a quantity of the older records from the various offices. A smaller room adjoining (formed by closing up one end of a hallway running through the building, and used also as the office of the Sealer of Weights and Measures) contains a number of volumes and a large quantity of papers tied in bundles and filed in pigeonholes and piled on top of cases. In the following report these two rooms are designated as Archive Room (AR) and Small Archive Room (SAR), and a casual examination will reveal the amount of material contained in them. The danger from interior fire would seem to be greatest in these two rooms, as practically their entire contents are inflammable.

The archives were examined in November, 1916.

VENTURA COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Ventura County began its existence on January 1, 1873. The act providing for its separation from Santa Barbara County was passed by the state legislature on March 22, 1872. In 1881, however, when the boundary between Los Angeles and Ventura was surveyed, the line followed was not that defined in the code of 1872 but the line of 1856 between Los Angeles and Santa Barbara counties. By a code amendment adopted in 1919 the boundaries were redefined and changed on the east and north. The city of Ventura has always been the county seat.

The first courthouse was built in 1873, and served the purposes of the county until 1912, when the offices and archives were all moved into the present new building, a beautiful structure erected at a cost of nearly $300,000. The present courthouse is practically fireproof, the window and door frames, and a few wooden fixtures moved over from the old building, mainly in the Clerk's vault, being about the only inflammable materials used.

It has no vaults, except a small one in the Treasurer's office housing a safe, the intention having been to construct the building in so solid a manner that no vaults would be needed. While the courthouse is practically immune from the possibility of a destructive fire from within or without, since it occupies an isolated position on the side of the hill, its windows are of plain glass and, though locked on the inside, can not be said to be particularly proof against burglary.

The third or attic story is provided with three dry, easily ventilated storerooms, labeled in this report as Recorder's, Clerk's and Sheriff's storerooms. The windows in the Clerk's storeroom are screened to keep out the bats and other undesirable inhabitants of public record rooms. Ventura County citizens may well be proud of their courthouse; it is the best sort of insurance against the irreparable loss of those records that must ever be the main source of the county's history.

The archives of this county were examined during June, 1916.

YOLO COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Yolo County was created in 1850, being one of the original counties of the state. At that times its territory was nearly twice as large as at present, for it extended as far north as the northern line of Sutter County, including, therefore, the greater part of what is now Colusa County. By subsequent legislation in 1851 and 1856 Colusa has been moved southward at Yolo's expense. Since 1857 practically no changes have been made.

The law creating the county fixed the seat of government at Fremont, a town then existing on the Sacramento River which gave promise of becoming a place of importance (a promise which signally failed of fulfillment). In 1851 the county seat was moved to Washington, where it remained for six years. In 1857 it was moved to Cacheville, now Yolo, and in 1861 returned to Washington. In 1862, however, an election definitely and finally located the county seat at the town of Woodland, which was then just springing into prominence.

The first courthouse, erected and furnished at a cost of about $30,000, was occupied early in 1865 and continued to be used until 1916, when it was torn down to make way for the courthouse which is now in course of construction. In 1888 the increasing business of the county necessitated the erection of a Hall of Records. At the present time (March, 1917) all of the county offices, except that of the Tax Collector, are crowded into this building. The office of the Tax Collector is located in the county jail, the offices of Sheriff and Tax Collector being combined. The Hall of Records is a brick building, lighted by electricity and heated with wood stoves; it will be removed when the new courthouse is completed. The latter structure will be one of which the people of Yolo may well be proud, as it is designed to include the best features of the most modern fireproof construction, and will besides be an ornament to the city and county. The building will cost about $250,000.

The examination of these archives was made in March, 1917.

YUBA COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

Yuba was one of the original counties into which the state was divided in 1850. At that time it included also the present counties of Nevada and Sierra and a portion of Placer. Nevada and Placer were separately organized in 1851, and Sierra in 1852. Marysville has been the seat of government during the entire period of the county's existence.

The present courthouse was built in 1855 at a cost of $22,000. The walls are of brick, the floors of wood. There is little danger from outside fires, but the interior construction would impose no serious obstacle to a fire started within the building. In this building are housed the offices of the Assessor, Treasurer-Tax Collector, Superintendent of Schools, Sheriff, and Justice of the Peace, on the first floor, and the Superior Court room, Judge's chamber, Supervisors' room and Law Library, on the second floor.

In part of the basement are stored a large quantity of discarded records, books and papers, the latter in boxes and the former piled about in rather a haphazard fashion. All this material is exposed to the destructive action of mould, dust and mice, particularly of mould. Much of this is of little or no importance, but there are some things of value, as the report shows. Besides the items listed as in the basement, there were found there three early minute books of the County Court and Court of Sessions, a Register of Suits before the First Alcalde of Marysville, several volumes of the School Superintendent's annual reports to the State Superintendent, and some other records, all of which were removed to their proper places upstairs or in the Hall of Records.

The Hall of Records was built in 1895, of brick, steel and concrete. It consists of a large main room in which are kept practically all the records of the Clerk, Auditor and Recorder, and two smaller office rooms on either side of the entrance. The office is supposed to be fire and burglar proof, as it has a concrete floor, no windows—the light coming from a large skylight—and all the doors leading into it are of steel. The basement is used as a jail, and the older jail building adjoins it in the rear. The officials in the Hall of Records have ample room for all present needs, though additional stacks may soon be necessary.

Electric lights and steam heat are used in both buildings. The office fixtures in the Hall of Records are for the most part modern and convenient.

The examination of these archives was made in January, 1917.

PRE-STATEHOOD RECORDS

Register of Suits before the First Alcalde of Marysville, Stephen J. Field, January-May, 1850, 1 v., in Clerk's office.

A very interesting volume. In several cases prisoners found guilty were sentenced to receive lashes upon the bare back; one example, taken from pages 112-117, is here given:

In the case of "The People of the State of California vs. Frederick Burcholder and John Barrett," the jury found the defendant Barrett guilty of stealing a tin box containing about sixty dollars worth of gold dust and a gold dust bag containing a quantity of gold dust of the value of from twelve to fifteen hundred dollars. The judgment of the Court was:

"Therefore it is ordered that the said defendant John Barrett be taken from this place to Johnson's ranch (the place where the theft was committed), and there receive on his bare back within twenty four hours from this time fifty lashes well laid on; and within forty eight hours from this time fifty additional lashes well laid on; and within three days from this time fifty additional lashes well laid on; and within four days from date fifty additional lashes well laid on; and within five days from date fifty additional lashes well laid on. But it is ordered that the four last punishments be remitted provided the said defendant make in the meantime restitution of the said gold dust bag and contents. The Sheriff is ordered to execute this judgment. Witness my hand and seal this seventh day of April, A. D. 1850.

STEPHEN J. FIELD (Seal)
First Alcalde of Marysville."

The record adds, under date of the 8th:

"The sentence executed by the infliction of twenty lashes, after receiving which he confessed the theft of the bag containing from twelve to fifteen hundred dollars in gold dust and made restitution of the same."
